How You Can Help Your Beer Retailer

Most tavern keepers are anxious to cooperate with the purposes of the industry's Self-Regulation program. They know it is just plain good business to keep their places clean and wholesome, and to operate within the law.

Most of the occasional violations of the law occur at the instance of the customer. This Committee urges you not to request special favors involving a violation. Patronize places that always operate in the public interest. Commend those who are noticeably careful about law observance. Report to us in confidence the names of those who are un mindful of good conduct.

It is the purpose of this Committee to cooperate with the law enforcement authorities, to weed out tavern keepers who flaunt the law, and to place the selling of beer on the same high plane as that of any other commodity.

CHAMBERS — Miss Vera Marlow, of Norfolk, became the bride of Paul Hubel, of Chambers, in a wedding ceremony that took place in the First Baptist church at Norfolk on May 25. Rev. Ira Halvorson, former Baptist minister at Chambers, officiated.

Miss Marjorie Smith sang "I Love You Truly" and "Nothing is So Sweet As the Name of Jesus."

The bride was attired in a white floor length gown with a fingertip veil. She wore a corsage of pink roses. Her sister attended her and wore a blue floor-length dress and a corsage of pink roses.

The bride groom was attended by his brother, Otto Hubel. Following the ceremony a reception was held in the church parlors for the relatives.

The couple left that evening for a trip through the Black Hills and Wyoming. They are at home on a farm at Chambers.

PRAIRIELAND TALK

By ROMAIN SAUNDERS

LINCOLN — The sandhills section of Nebraska, a range of which crosses Holt county, was once regarded with contempt by the clodhoppers of the corn lands. This large area has come into prominence the past quarter of a century as ideal ranch country and is destined to remain so. It is ideal in that there is abundance of both winter and summer feed for the beef herds.

Out there where hills of white sand covered with native grass merge into vast stretches of meadow and valley land there is something more than 20-cent beef on the hoof. There is open country, fresh water lakes and flowing streams; there is prairieland robed in green and decorated with the pink bloom of roses, deep blue of wild iris and flaming clusters of goldenrod; there is meadow lark and prairie chicken, golden-crested eagle and arrogant pheasant cock, mild-eyed deer and cunning coyote, jack rabbit and badger; there is pink of dawn, glare of noonday, gold of sunset and night sky with celestial glory; there is freedom for men and women and boys and girls out in God's sunlight.

A writer for a great eastern magazine has found the Nebraska paradise in the sandhills. In magazine style of fable and fact he tells a good story, closing with this one:

"A rancher who owed $75,000 asked the lender to drop around and be paid off. He was fixing a fence when the man appeared. 'Hello, Jim.' 'Hello, Sam. I left that up the line. Want to walk up?' They walked half a mile to where a vest hung on the fence. From the vest Jim pulled out $75,000 in currency. 'Thanks, Jim.' 'G'by, Sam.'"

Demands of the fast-moving present overshadow interest in the past, while a curtain forever hangs between today and tomorrow. Summer verdure, winter snows and spring floods for a period of nearly three-quarters of a century have left a mark on prairieland since the McEvony, Butney, Dickerson, Prouty, Sanford and Thompson party invaded the domain of the buffalo, antelope and elk, casting anchor on what has since become Holt county soil. On July 13, 1873, these families unhooked their teams from immigrant wagons, established what is said to have been the first settlement in what Doc Matthews later made famous as God's country. This settlement was three miles down the river from the east limits of O'Neill. They called their settlement Rockford postoffice, but just how the United States mails got in there is lost in the mists of time. But there is some doubt as to whether this was the first settlement. Another party a little before or about the same time started what became known as Frenchtown, located close to what became the east line of Holt county upon its organization in 1878. At any rate, is a suggestion that July 15 be observed in the community as pioneer day permissible?

A day in January, 1824, the irrepressible Henry Clay stood before assembled members of the house of representatives and poured forth a stream of eloquence in a plea for the Congress to send "a messenger to Greece to inquire into her state and condition." We are still sending messengers "to inquire into the state and condition" of Hellenic culture — this time with a roll of $250,000,000.

Twila Whaley, of O'Neill, light blouse, dark skirt and a wealth of hair done in waves, was shown in a three-column setting asking questions of one of the experts who talked to the 405 4-H club members down at the ag college campus last week. The picture of Miss Whaley and a young gent from Aurora with the expert cornered between them rated a bold position with others in the Lincoln Sunday paper of June 8, which gave the 4-H boys and girls much attention. Rural youth of Nebraska have been coming annually to the agricultural college for the lectures and interchange of ideas and plans for something like 30 years. If the ag functioned for no other purpose than for the inspiration it brings to young Nebraska it would be worthwhile.

Citizens of Minden will spray the town and two miles beyond on each side with DDT to clear the community of flies.

The labor bill, signed last week by the governor and to become law in September, eliminates the closed shop in Nebraska. Churchill, the late FDR's tutor in international politics, submitted to what the hospitals call surgery for hernia. The state will pay one-half of appraised value of animals destroyed because of foot and mouth disease. Capt. C. J. Sanders, of the state highway patrol, feels Nebraska is a good place to stay and has declined the offer of a job directing traffic in a section of Germany.

An Oelwein, Ia., railroad foreman spent $22.50 on a telephone call to Moscow to have a chat with Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov, who wanted to know first off if it was "politics or world affairs." "No," said the Iowa voice, and away they went for several minutes talking about railroads with a word-picture of the good old state of Iowa thrown in. "We don't know where Iowa is, but we are glad you called," said the Muscovites at the Kremlin. This Iowa gent has done more in a few minutes toward a feeling of good will between two people than statesmen and diplomats have done in two years.

A penitentiary inmate sent up from North Platte for the murder of his wife and father-in-law 13 years ago says he is sorry, but apparently not sorry to the extent that he should pay the full penalty for his crime. He wants to get out. Sorry for what? His brutal deed that put him in the pen or for being imprisoned? Some fellows get mighty sorry after they are behind prison walls. The pardon board had previously reduced this life sentence materially for reason it is difficult to justify. In all but rare cases the penalty fixed by law and sentence of trial court should stand.

The good old American way of life is coming back little by little. We can make a bonfire of our ration books which will send up in smoke untold millions of dollars the government has invested in them. Hardly a stamp was taken from books two and three.

Henry Wallace hasn't a newspaper in the country backing him. Neither did FDR in the birth pangs of the New Deal.

Americans are well-fed — who don't have to eat at a restaurant.

Dick Cronin was busy going to and from the file room and taking copies of legislative bills to senators out on the floor—when he wasn't talking to the girls; there was read from the desk letters from Nebraska patriots with ideas of "what ought to be done;" senators lolled in their seats as they listened to these or talked to the fellow at the next desk; one young gent over at Omaha with an artistic eye wants a new design for automobile plates; a few Nebraskans having been thus heard from there was droned from the desk the contents of several bills, the disposal of which terminated the session.

Among these was the sizeable list of appropriations which seemed to be old stuff to all members present, who talked among themselves, read the morning papers, and sent clouds of smoke ceilingward. The final vote on each resolution, each measure for adoption into the fundamental law of prairieland or rejection was taken and the "unicam" session came to its worn and weary end for 1947. What has been the mixture it is for the lawyer to find out. Sen. Copeland from up home was absent at morning roll call the last day of the session.

Mr. Ritchie's Jacksonian blood can brook no such scandalous thing as the appointment of a Nebraska republican coming from a democrat in the White House. From the angle of strictly party concern, Mr. Ritchie is showing the right spirit when he offers to resign as national committeeman. It would be interesting to hear from the two oldtime party warhorses, Edgar Howard, of Columbus, and Will Maupin down at Clay Center.

Chancellor Gustavson of the state university has administered a rebuke to the critics of the Nebraska school system with a special barrage aimed in defense of parents and taxpayers whom he regards as doing splendidly in maintaining a school system of high standards. The chancellor has given us something new and refreshing on the educational backwater.

The Lincoln linotype operator, who inspired by firewater punched the faces of two gents and a bird of paradise, caught a sentence of $250 in police court. Printers are scarce on police records but if the minions of the law get one he proves to be no one dollar gent.

An Arkansas paper says a man's home is his castle, specifying that the man be single. Castle indeed if you call a hovel a castle.
