Qualified
Under the Law Nebraska law is strict in the qualifications demanded of an applicant for a license to sell beer and operate a tavern. The applicant must declare under oath that he meets all the requirements. He is subject to a public hearing on his application, where licensing officials and citizens may examine his fitness for the responsibility of a license.
The strict requirements of the Nebraska law are all to the good and largely account for the fact that most Nebraska beer retailers rate well as citizens and businessmen.

The Nebraska Committee fully approves and supports strict requirements for licenses —just as it supports all laws and rules of good conduct to keep beer retailing on the highest possible plane.

Out of Old Nebraska — First State Fair Also First Territorial Fair in the U. S.

By Supt. James C. Olson, State Historical Society

The state fair week brings to mind the first territorial fair held in Nebraska City September 21-23, 1859. While it can hardly be compared with the present day exhibition, it is notable not only as the first fair of its kind in Nebraska, but also as the first territorial fair held in the United States.
Nebraska City was chosen as the site as the result of a competition conducted by the territorial board of agriculture. The Otoe county people offered to enclose a 10-acre tract with an eight-foot board fence, and, according to a story in the Nebraska City News, to provide "all the necessary stalls for stock, a floral hall, sheds for agricultural, mechanical and other implements and mechanisms, and a first-class show ground for exhibiting horses, etc."

The list of premiums indicates that the managers did not overlook any type of article that could be grown or manufactured in the new territory. Prizes were offered for a wide variety of exhibits, and ranged in value from $20 for the best jack and the best 10-yoke of working oxen from any one county, to 50 cents for such articles as the best pair of cotton wove stockings or the best pair of woolen fringed mittens. In addition, there were a good many items for which no cash was awarded, just a diploma.

Aside from the exhibits, the principal attraction appears to have been a speech by J.
Sterling Morton, then the 27-year-old secretary of the territory.

The fair was not a financial success, and another one was not held until 1869. There were many difficulties in the way of a successful exhibition.
The times were hard (the territory had not yet recovered from the disastrous panic of 1857), and many at a distance felt they could not incur the expense of attending. Even if they could have, the two regular steamboat packets — the primary means of transportation — were out of commission, one was sunk and the other fast to a sandbar.

Then, as the time for the exhibition grew near, the board of agriculture found it didn't have sufficient money to pay the premiums advertised; therefore, it had to pay off in territorial warrants which, even though they drew 10 percent, were not received with particular enthusiasm by farmers who had seen paper money become absolutely worthless two years previous.

Finally, as the Brownville Advertiser put it, the territory was "in the midst of election excitement, and everybody thinking and talking politics."

Even so, it was a good beginning, and, to quote the Advertiser again, "Taking everything into consideration, we repeat, the result was all the most sanguine friends of the enterprise could expect."

Mr. and Mrs. Arlen Kirk, of Spencer, visited the latter's father, Thomas Donlin, Sunday.

Ray Sullivan and Edward Condon returned Tuesday from Lincoln where they had spent two days.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Tomlin-son drove their son, Michael, Nebraska City, Tuesday to attend school.

Mrs. Ralph McElvain and Mrs.
Thomas J. Sullivan were in Norfolk Friday.

On Sunday Mr. and Mrs.
Walter Young and children and Mr. and Mrs. Guy Young drove to Creighton to visit friends.

Mrs. C. B. Yarnall, of Linwood, Calif., arrived Friday for a short stay with Mr. and Mrs.
Charles E. Yarnall.
