To the Tavern Keeper Who Can't Say "No!"

If you lack the courage to say "NO" when customers ask you to violate the law and the rules of good conduct, you are too timid for your own good. Your fellow citizens will condemn you as a law violator and this Committee will not defend you in the Court of Public Opinion.

The result of educational work by this Committee has been highly gratifying. Those who know—those who patronize the taverns of Nebraska—will attest to the fact that law observance has reached a high level in this state.

Most tavernkeepers have learned to say "NO" when customers ask them to "break the rules." The friends of beer have learned NOT to ask tavernkeepers to violate their good conduct pledges.

It is the purpose of this Committee that there shall be constant and continued improvement.

PRAIRIELAND TALK

SAUNDERS

LINCOLN—November... bringing somber days marching with stealthy tread into the arms of winter's cold embrace. Frost upon the meadows has wiped away the color, sucked up the fragrance, of summer's floral bloom. Dreary skies, drizzle by day and gloom by night, dead leaves fallen to earth and chill winds blowing across the land, birds flown and fur-clothed creatures seek for shelter among denuded trees.

November... and it is the season in which the American Thanksgiving falls. Out of the world's dark picture what is there to be thankful for? Home, abundance, the laughter and the tears of childhood, the fellowship of friends and our transcending spiritual heritage. Then—

Pick up life's memories, joy and pain, And cherish the cool, sweet sweep of the rain. Rain must fall, beauty fade, But the stars are forever stay'd— "And you and I will not be afraid."

By means of subsidies on the one hand and destruction of food products on the other, Washington kept prices up. Now comes a session of congress to pull prices down.

On the sides of closed delivery trucks moving through the streets are emblazoned: "Everything for the Home." That is a large claim. Out of those trucks does there come mutual understanding, mutual devotion, filial, hymeneal and parental love; can thoughtful courtesies and helpful sympathy come out of a delivery truck, or does it have the niceties of life, the laughter and the tears, the flavor and rainbow hues glowing upon the fabric of the soul of the household—all this to come boxed and ready for family use?

"Everything for the Home," you who are going hand in hand to the marriage license desk, means that a dealer in furniture can put the chairs and tables and other sticks of stuff in the house but you have to make the home grow out of the wealth of steadfast devotion which forever insures that the early bloom does not go to seed.

Without allowing time to see how the law will work, some who cherish a union membership card above a prayer book or testament are violently opposed to the Taft labor law and will support no one for congress who voted its passage. It is such attitude on the part of union labor that arouses public sentiment against them. Try out the law and if it is no good it can be changed, amended or repealed. The trouble with union labor is they want a free hand to dominate the labor market and have capital hog-tied by antitrust laws. The fix Merry England is in is a shining example of what results when labor runs things.

Nebraska Better Fishing association is the name of a setup that finds time between castings to hold monthly meetings. Just what its functions are I am not prepared to say, but I think there are several fellows down there around Amelia that can swing the blue gills and black bass out with a bamboo pole in a fashion that might make any member of this state association green with envy.

An army man of high rank gives it as his considerate belief that the nations of Earth are equipped with weapons capable of wiping out all life on the planet. Is that the thing men have learned to do after six thousand years of human experiments?

Here from Omaha— James and Maxine Golden spent the weekend at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Golden.
