Story of Cal and Ruth Thompson Told in National Publication

National attention is focused on northern Nebraska's White Horse Ranch by the February issue of The American Magazine, which devotes two pages to a picture-story about the unique operation of Cal and Ruth Thompson.

The magazine makes generous use of photographs to show that not only are all the ranch's horses white, but there also are white ducks, geese, turkeys, rabbits, cats, dogs, barns and house, corrals, and fence posts to say nothing of a bull named Ferdinand and Clarabelle the cow.
