PRAIRIELAND By ROMAINE SAUNDERS
... TALK

LINCOLN—A banquet March 22 at the Cornhusker ended a 2-day love feast of Nebraska Republicans, who came in droves across prairieland from the Wyoming line. It was a notable gathering of fine appearing men and women from McCook, Alliance, Scottsbluff, Grand Island and other out-state communities that stormed Lincoln. Among the celebrities from other states were Governor and Mrs. Earl Warren and the governor's secretary, who found their way across deserts, mountains and prairieland from Sacramento, Calif. The governor's presence was in response to an invitation to address Republican patriots on Founders' Day.

The governor explained he had accepted the invitation before his name was filed here to go on the primary ballot as a candidate for the nomination for president, and he was not going to make a political speech. And the entire gathering was notable for a lack of sharp thrusts at other political groups.

Both the young Republican and women's organizations were in convention previous to the Founders' day gathering and program. Mrs. Addison B. Green of Holyoke, Mass., was the guest speaker for the ladies organization. Friends of the various candidates for the presidency milled about the Cornhusker lobby and the general sentiment expressed was that either of the candidates to be endorsed at the Philadelphia convention would receive full support in Nebraska.

Through the courtesy of a friend I was handed a $3 banquet ticket, so was one of the multitude that gathered at the tables in 2 large rooms. The capacity of the Cornhusker to entertain crowds was put to the limit. The youngest to circulate among the crowd Monday was little Dan Wherry in knee pants who came in from Tecumseh with his grandfather. The oldest was an 89-year-old patriot, Frank B. Moore, of Lincoln, who "button-holed" me in behalf of Gov. Dewey. I looked in vain for a familiar face from O'Neill.

If it were anyone but Prof. George who had the management of those armies of juvenile musicians meeting in O'Neill they would have my sympathy. But Mr. George has a way with young America that permits him not only to be at his best among them but has cordial cooperation because, as one young lad expressed it to me, "He is a great guy."

Scarcely a week rolls into the scroll of time that The Frontier does not record the story of a pioneer of prairieland having been visited by the grim reaper. Two such, whose early days were identified with the beginning of developments in Holt county, were given to the readers last week.

Mrs. G. Ezra Mor found rest in death after some years suffering on a bed of pain. And so a beautiful life that had lent a glow to everything worthwhile and uplifting for more than a half-century not alone in the Inman community but radiated to wide circles surrendered to the inevitable.

The community feels the loss but in the deeper sense the blow falls on Ezra, to whom I can only offer the feeble consolation of one who has gone through the deep waters and closed the door on a desolated home. Out beyond the far unknown we will await the summons to join the loved and lost when things of earth have forever perished.

Irrigation continues mildly agitated. Agitation will go on whether it be in search of means to produce more, training our boys as soldiers, more and bigger schools or the remedy for juvenile delinquency. It is not so long ago the cry of "over-production" was heard and here came a gent to knock the meat on the hoof in the head, plow under the growing grain, and set fire to that which had been harvested. Upon the whole, Nebraska prairies produce enough year by year under the ministrations of natural elements, with an off-year now and then that the good earth may have one season of rest. Irrigate, but look out—here comes a government agent to tell you that you are creating an over-production. One such former agent now comes before us asking for votes to put him in the White House.

Thomas E. Dewey is not an Eastern man. He is a native of Michigan and has taken East a sizable slice of the central states' honesty, integrity and administrative ability. He was born in 1902 and is now at life's zenith. He has a liking for agriculture and has a farm under the welcoming shadows of Berkshire hills. In nature's mysterious laboratory he has discovered something of the orderly processes governing the universe and drawn lessons to inspire the soul with the elements of a genius who feels the pulsebeat of the neighbor on the next farm or that of the whole nation. Farmer, statesman, head erect in the crowd and bowed in humility and admiration in the presence of the handwork of the Creator when "the evening star drops low in the heart of the sunset's afterglow." This brings to the Dewey philosophy of government the warmth of the human touch.

Forty-two years back in the affairs of Holt county patriots the largest private home in the county was brought to completion on a section of land south of Stuart owned by J. H. Brown, a pioneer of that community. The house was 32 feet square, 3 stories and contained 20 rooms.

The board of education, children and youth, fathers and mothers in Minneapolis, Minn., have been betrayed by striking school teachers. At the beginning of the school year, the teachers accepted the responsibility of keeping the schools going. In disregard of this contracted responsibility two-thirds of the teaching force is now on strike, closing the city's schools to the thousands of pupils. It is not only a bad example for the young but such disregard of contracted agreements reflects discredit on an honored profession and partakes of the spirit of the rowdy.

Marsh 21 ushers in the vernal equinox. Out of the north blows a March wind, clouds have gathered across the sky and out there over the brown hills of Lancaster may be seen strips of black earth where the plowman has started another season's round of farm work, then gone to the house to repose in warm idleness for a few more days. A few more weeks and the sower will go forth to sow. Seed time and then harvest, perpetual as the granite hills, enduring as the sullen sea, as certain as the eternal stars. And without the bounties of nature man must perish from the earth.
