

SAMPLE DEMOCRATIC PRIMARY BALLOT

Primary Election April 13, 1948

LINCOLN—The name Thomas E. Dewey on the Republican primary ballot for president is heard in every household. Whatever advantage there is the second time up goes to the New York governor. The recommendation that appeals to Nebraska citizens is the Dewey record of achievements in that great and densely populated state of New York.

As a private citizen, as a public official, there is none in the American picture today that enjoys the confidence and esteem of all classes of worthwhile citizens or that has inspired the fear of political grafters and underworld bigwigs more than Governor Dewey.

If nominated and elected to the presidency, he will cloth the chief executive branch of government in the vestments of efficiency at a time never more needed.

At 48th and Pioneers, meaning on the outskirts of Lincoln and facing open country, it happened. Formerly only in the event of fatal tragedy was a run-away horse worth mentioning.

O'Neill has had some grand political shows. And now for the first time there has just been entertained the first candidate out campaigning for that coveted prize: the social eminence of being America's first lady.

Little things that can be held in the hollow of the hand! A Japanese wife and mother who had lived in Korea and accepted the Christian faith tells it in her own words:

"I gaze at little things in the hollow of the hand—white and brown silk thread, 3 safety pins, 3 needles. These little things make me happy more than ear-rings set with pearls or finger rings with rubies. . . . Hatel war had happened and Japan was defeated. We returned to the mother land with bare life. Took a little child by the hand, carried on my back an infant with few clothes at hand, but in our mother land minds of people also had been defeated. There blew only the cold winds of heats. Such was our poverty that even daily necessities were counted among our wants."

After visiting the mission-aries in Tokyo she had this to say:

"I wept tears of joy for encouragement and hope of faith made new my heart. I was given clothes which were sent by friends of same faith in America far away. My husband got a new coat. I returned home overwhelmed with gratitude. I dressed my children and delighted them. As the coat for my husband was too large I gazed at it with wish to make it smaller. Suddenly I found in a pocket sewing thread. Why should it have sewing thread? I opened it dubiously. White and brown silk thread, 3 safety pins, 3 needles were found. Oh, my friend in America who sent this coat! I think I can see your smiling face when I am gazing at these things in the hollow of my hand. You speak to me: 'I send you the coat; you can mend it with the thread and needles when it is rent.'"

"These little things in a pocket of a coat are shining as if it were a symbol of your heart. I am happy. I am happy to get your whole heart enclosed with these things, better than to get several coats."

"Friends in far America, I wish to present my hearty thanks to the sky in far America, gazing at these little things in the hollow of my hand!"

A speaker from aboard, addressing a large group of students, said the next war will last 30 minutes. One of our state's congressmen was out here and told us the U. S. fleet was in the Mediterranean with cargos of atom bombs. snug, complacent, the Capital City jogs along and refuses to take alarm at hair-raising threats. If a grease spot is made of us Earth dwellers in 30 minutes that will probably be a fitting climax to our human monkeyshines.

A printer who learned the trade in O'Neill (and who after 5 years apprenticeship was paid $2 for a 10-hour day that at least once a week stretched to 15 hours) tells me he is now getting $18.50 for a 7-hour day on a job in Seattle, Wash. And he is about 73-years old, still going strong, nearing 4 score years and earning $92.50 for a 5-day week. Who says we are worthless in industry after 40?

I wonder if the congress who let out some information on the international situation at the Founders' Day banquet doesn't know more about what is going on abroad — and is not afraid to tell us — than his self-appointed critics sitting out here on the prairie.
