

Youth Memorial Fund Drive Launched

Ag College Campus Structure to Cost $250,000

American Legion sponsored efforts to raise at least 250 thousand dollars for a Nebraska Youth Memorial building took concrete form recently with the release of an architect's conception of the proposed structure, which is to be located on the University of Nebraska college of agriculture campus.

The building will serve as headquarters for the thousands of boys and girls from out-state who convene at various times during the year for youth programs at the state university.

Tentative plans call for accommodations to simultaneously feed and house 400 youngsters, both boys and girls.

In addition to the 4-H club groups and the Cornhusker Boys' and Girls' States, the building will house high school students from all over Nebraska who journey to the state university for musical festivals, basketball tournaments and other activities. Such groups as the Flying Farmers, Feeders' day gatherings, agricultural extension groups and short course attendants will also utilize the building.

Harry B. Coffee, of Omaha, chairman of the sponsoring committee, recently said funds for the building will be solicited from the entire Nebraska population to use in promoting all statewide youth and agriculture programs.

ed the proposed building as "the answer to a long-hoped-for need, as well as an investment in Nebraska's 2 fundamental resources — youth and agriculture."

On March 15, Gov. Val Peterson, in an official proclamation, urged every citizen of the state to give full support to the campaign. At that time, Legion spokesmen pointed out that the drive is particularly worthy, for Nebraska citizens are being asked to donate to a cause from which they will directly benefit.

E. P. Barnes, of Omaha, state commander of the American Legion, emphasized that the civic campaign for the Youth Memorial building is to be "by Nebraskans, for Nebraskans — an investment which will result in a badly needed building constructed on state property, for all of our Nebraska youth!"

As conceived, the building will be a living "memorial" to the men and women from Nebraska who served in World War II.

J. Leroy Welsh, of Omaha, recently gave $1,000 to the building fund. In the photo are: J. Francis McDermott, of Omaha, (left); Welsh; Harry B. Coffee, of Omaha, chairman of the Nebraska Youth Memorial committee, and Earle P. Barnes, of Omaha, Nebraska department commander of the American Legion.

"In broader terms, however, the building will also be a memorial to our faith in the youth of today, and the youth of tomorrow who will use the building through the years," Chairman Coffee said.
