NOW A DETACHABLE FUSELAGE . . . The U. S. air force has asked Fairchild aircraft division to develop a detachable fuselage aircraft to be known as the XC-120 pack plane. Based on the trailer-truck principle, the plane will be capable of flying with or without its fuselage. Since the packs can be constructed in several different shapes, they present numerous possibilities for the transport of supplies and personnel. Such facilities as flying surgical units, portable mess sections and statistical control units can be designed without a detachable fuselage.
