MARY CORRIGAN KAISER IS CALLED BY DEATH

(Atkinson Graphic)
Mrs. Mary Corrigan Kaiser, 80, who came to Holt county with the pioneering Corrigan family 53 years ago, passed away Wednesday at the home of her brother, Joe Corrigan, three miles southeast of Atkinson. Mrs. Kaiser took ill suddenly Tuesday evening.
Funeral services will be held in the Emmet Catholic church this morning at 10 o'clock, conducted by the Rev. M. F. Byrne. Burial will be made in St. Joseph's cemetery, in the family lot.

Mary Corrigan was born in County Tyrone, near the town of Glengear, Ireland, in 1851. When a young girl she came to America with the family and in 1877 came with them to Holt county, Nebraska to live.
Forty years ago she was married in Omaha to John Kaiser and she made her home in that city, during its various stages of growth and progress, until the death of her husband in 1918. She then came back to Holt county and made her home with her brothers Joe and William at Atkinson, who together with two other brothers, Barney of Page and Mike of Kansas City, Mo., survive her. A number of nieces and nephews also mourn her death.

PUMP IRRIGATION PROVING SUCCESSFUL IN NEBRASKA

(Sioux City Journal)
The semi-arid nature of Nebraska, emphasized by the present unprecedented period of drouth, is doing more for flood control and irrigation promotion than spellbinders could have accomplished in 50 years. Pump irrigation is being investigated and experimented with in many sections of the state.
Flood control irrigation will be available to the fortunate few owning acres along low, level valleys. The majority will have to look to the earth's water storehouse for water that somehow has failed to drop from the skies.
In the upper Platte river valley, pump water irrigation is an old story. Every well has proved itself an unending fountain of liquid gold. Like all new ideas, other sections are lolling along in the old way while crops wither to waste year after year. Here and there deep wells dug at great expense have failed to deliver sufficient water to flood crops. These are exceptions. Most holes yield more than enough water to soak one man's crops.
In western Holt county, near Stuart, there are five giant wells having 24-inch casing and capable of yielding about 1,000 gallons of water per minute. These are rated to cover an acre of ground with plenty of water in 77 minutes. Some of these wells are down 63 feet. Water is pumped from them by a common purpose tractor. Batenhorst brothers, of near Stuart, are watering 100 acres of as fine looking corn as ever stood. Potatoes and alfalfa also are soaked on this farm.

According to Joseph Batenhorst, an unlimited supply of water is not necessary for irrigation. He says rains may be depended upon excepting a few weeks in July and August and that often one good pump water soaking a season is all that is necessary to produce a bountiful crop.
The Batenhorsts expect to harvest from 60 to 70 bushels of corn this fall.
Not always is pump water suitable for the irrigation of crops. Alkali and other detrimental substances are often present to kill or stunt vegetation. Only in a few localities are those harmful substances present in water.

Roughly, pump irrigation costs about $1 per acre. Those irrigating with pump water don't care if drouth does send corn to $5 per bushel.
