

Mercolized Wax Keeps Skin Young

Get an ounce and use as directed. Fine particles of aged skin peel off until all defects such as pimples, liver spots, tan and freckles disappear. Skin is then soft and velvety. Your face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty of your skin. To remove wrinkles use one ounce powdered Saxolin dissolved in one-half pint weak beer. At drug stores.

Automobiles Are Banned

The presence of automobiles in the vicinity of the transatlantic radio telephone stations interferes with the delicate instruments and makes reception difficult, so that all automobiles are banned from the grounds and deliveries are made by horse-drawn vehicles. This applies to all cars except those connected with the station, which are handled in such a way as to prevent this interference.

Getting Set for the Month

The Wife—Well, I hired three new maids this morning.
Hubby—Are you losing your mind?
The Wife—No, no, dear. One comes tomorrow, one on the tenth and another on the fifteenth.

"TARGET hits the bull's-eye on every count. It's the new idea in roll-your-own tobacco... real cigarette tobacco, blended just like ready-mades."

"And the smokes you roll from Target look like ready-mades. They stay plump, and don't troll out at the ends. You get 40 gummed papers free with every package. No more roll-your-own smokes that bust open while you're trying to smoke them."

"And the saving you make is a 1932 idea. Just think of it, I get thirty or more well smokes from each pack of Target. And I pay only one dime. Yes, sir, I'm for Target."

AND GET THIS: The U.S. Government Tax on 20 cigarettes amounts to 6¢. On 20 cigarettes you roll from Target Tobacco the tax is just about 1¢. No wonder you get such value for a dime!

Builds Up Health After Bronchial Coughs

Cedar Falls, Iowa—"I had the 'flu' and I did not get along well afterward; I would catch a cold and it would settle in my bronchial tubes, setting up an irritation, followed by a severe cough," said A. Wagner of 515 Lincoln St. "I would have these spells every winter and would have to give up my work for a time. But since I have taken Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, I have not had any of these spells; it has so strengthened my bronchials and built me up in health that I go through the winter without having any colds or coughs."

FRANCE ENDS "NOSE COUNT"

Paris — (UP) — The complete census returns made public by the government show that the author of the lyric which had its run on Broadway several years ago, "Fifty Million Frenchmen Can't Be Wrong" was guilty of exaggeration.

By actual count there are but 38,248,255 Frenchmen and 2,495,642 foreigners in France, a total population of 41,834,923.

This census was very satisfactory, for it showed a revitalized race, and for the first time in a quarter of a century, France showed a population gain through births rather than through increased influx of foreigners. The previous census in 1926, showed but 38,248,255 Frenchmen and a total population of 40,743,897.

The foreign penetration is so great that in the Alpes-Maritimes department, which comprises the French Riviera and the Franco-Italian frontier, two out of every five persons are foreigners. Italians predominate, with English in second place.

In Paris and the Seine department one resident in 10 is a foreigner, and here again the Italians lead all races, with British second, Americans third, Germans fourth, followed by Spanish, Belgians, Poles and varied Africans.

DIVERSIFIED PHILOSOPHY

Equality we never want, With those without the pale; But with the folk above us placed— Well that's another tale.

We might as well forget at once That money that we lent; For though those loans may not be sound, We know they're permanent.

CRIME AND PUNISHMENT

From Indianapolis News

The tendency in recent years to lengthen the sentence of criminals rated as second and third offenders, and to give life sentences to fourth offenders, has drawn the fire of prison reformers. They have tried in vain to persuade legislatures to soften the laws in the interest of what they call humanitarian standards. They feel that society is to blame for not finding a way to detect and eradicate criminal tendencies in young persons and that a sentence for crime is a confession of social failure, with the prisoner paying the penalty.

The deterrent value of the habitual criminal acts is constantly stressed by police and judicial officers. At a recent convention of the District Attorney's association of the state of New York a proposal to modify the habitual criminal act was rejected by a large majority, so large that the minority conceded unanimity, and the record so shows. The main arguments were that the Washington and the Cherry Surplus.

From the St. Louis Dispatch.
In this bicentennial year, the yarn about Washington and the cherry trees is catalogued as a flight of Parson Weems' fertile imagination, though long accepted as sober fact. It took Washington's reputation 126 years to live down that Little Rollo story (it first appeared in print in 1806). It would be far more difficult, however, to debunk such a legend should it gain currency today. Such a report from a Virginia farm in 1932 would be meat, drink and dessert to the farm board wisecracks law had kept many offenders from taking another chance. The old offender knows this law. He has been tried, convicted and sentenced to prison three times. His court experience and his prison education have familiarized him with it. The district attorneys believe, according to their discussion and vote, that an old offender falling a life sentence is frightened into making a sincere effort to accommodate his behavior to social standards.

Homely But Wholesome

Long sentences express the public view that a person convicted of the crimes designated should be kept beyond the possibility of mischief so much for his own sake, or even for the promotion of his reformation, as for the relief of society from anxiety attendant on knowledge that he is at large. If there is proper regard for the element of ignorance or evil companionship in considering the convictions of young first offenders, the people apparently feel that they have satisfied their humanitarian instincts. Their whole desire is to give another chance to new criminals, unless the crime is very serious. In states taking the extreme course with hardened criminals, there is a noticeable tendency, when the police and courts are alert, toward driving felons to reform or to other pastures. The old theory that increasing penalties beyond reason discourages jury convictions is sound, but apparently this point has not been reached.

"Wipe Out Guilt Clause."
Albert Guerard in the North American Review.
Versailles (the treaty) is crumbling by imperceptible degrees. The process could be immeasurably quickened if only France volunteered to expunge the "guilt" clause. This clause, which claims to be moral, is morally invalid because it was enacted by force. It is unjust as applied to republican Germany. There is no sense at present in condemning the defunct Hohenzollern empire; the very existence of the German republic is its condemnation.

It would not be necessary to concoct special lies in solving the cotton problem by advice to plow under every third row and who grapple with the dairy situation by suggesting extermination of every tenth cow. These economic wizards would at once hail the little Washington boy as a patriot seeking to end the cherry surplus by using their methods. It would be simple to prove that a cherry surplus exists, what with the abundance of cherry queens in the orchard states, the vast number of cherry pies presented to the white house, and the radio crooner's unanimous mumbled that life is just a bowl of cherries. A new venue all the signatories of Versailles; a one-sided declaration on the part of France would suffice. This clause expunged, Germany would be automatically liberated from any punitive indemnity, such as the one imposed upon France in 1871; she would not be liable, either, for the cost of the war to the allies. But she would not be excused from reparations.

For the sake of peace, the world must learn that it does not pay to be the aggressor. And, in spite of all quibbling, the aggressor is the one who fires the first shot. Let there be no first shot, there will be no war. If we admitted the Prussian plea, that a nation in self-defense may strike first, the lesson of 1914-18 would have been in vain. "Guilty" or not, whoever crosses his neighbor's frontier should be held accountable for every damage done beyond. If Germany, like France, had held her troops 10 kilometers within her own boundaries, the whole tragedy would have been averted.

FEW FISH ESCAPE PURSUIT OF OTTER

Among all the animals that are good fishermen, there is probably none more capable than the otter. You can often locate him by finding broken shells of shellfish, of which he seems to be especially fond. He leaves the scattered fragments of his meal on the banks of streams and lakes and among the rocks.

The coat of the otter is of brown fur, and it is so valuable that, in order to prevent men from taking it from him, as he prefers to wear it himself, he hides away near secluded lakes or water courses far from any place where men live. He is almost twice the size of the mink, being often 40 inches long, and looks something like a seal when he is partly out of water and his wet fur gleams in the sun.

This clever fisherman is the champion of the fishing veterans who wear fur. No fish is too swift for him. Whereas the mink prefers to take his fishing easily, the otter dives, swims or floats after his prey. He is an expert swimmer and can dart about under the water with wonderful speed, so that no fish has much of a chance when he goes fishing. He always catches his fish.

Another water dweller who sometimes get credit as a fisherman, but lives on a vegetarian diet, is the beaver. The beaver builds his home out in the water and there stores up his winter food. He likes the bark of trees and these he cuts down when they are succulent and tender with the sap. He gathers enough to tide him over the winter time, and lives on his hoard, leaving the fish, strangely enough, strictly alone.

Scot Saw Possibilities of Under-Water Craft

The story of the evolution of under-water boats seldom makes mention of a Scotsman's idea which, had it been translated into practical form, might have given Scotland the honor of producing the first submarine, says a writer in the Weekly Scotsman. That distinction falls, actually, to a Dutchman, Cornelius Van Drebbell, who constructed a submersible craft which was tried out on the River Thames, near London, in the early part of 1624, but did not prove much of a success.

It is a remarkable fact that nearly thirty years before Van Drebbell's invention John Napier inventor of logarithms, announced that he had in mind a similar innovation in methods of navigation. In a pamphlet which he published in Edinburgh on June 7, 1596, Napier referred to "devices of sailing under the waters," which he "hopes to perform." He does not appear to have attempted to realize that hope, however, and no more is heard of the idea of a Scottish submarine which, we may take it, would have given the Firth of Forth an additional measure of fame.

Store With a History

One of the oldest stores in Philadelphia is this year celebrating its one hundred and eighty-first anniversary. It is a little gunsmith shop and was first opened for business in 1751. The site was originally sold by William Penn in 1684 and William Drinker erected a building in which the first white child born in the Quaker colony was born.
