House of Jacks Built by Jills

"Desert Queen"

Fresh from a mining camp to the University of Arizona came beautiful Eleanor Arthur (above), of Douglas, Ariz., to win her way into the hearts of her fellow-students, who have just crowned her "Queen of the Desert," and hailed her as a "general good fellow." Miss Arthur doesn't smoke, has never cut her hair and would rather ride a horse than pour tea.

With a huge deck of playing cards, these bathing beauties on the beach at Venice, Cal., build a giant house of cards—a house so firm on its foundation of sand that the Pacific's best breeze can't blow it down. In the true feminine manner, you will notice they have placed the heart at the very peak.

Stolen by Artful Robber

Cut loose from its frame, this "Portrait by Night," the work of Hilda Belcher, was mysteriously stolen from the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, in Philadelphia, within a short distance of students, attendants and visitors. Police believe the picture was taken by a lover of art.

Visiting Charmer

Miss Benita Hume, well-known English actress, is shown as she waved a joyful greeting from the liner Leviathan as she arrived at New York to fill an American stage engagement. Miss Hume was voted the most charming girl on board by her fellow passengers, among whom was her fiance, Jack Dunfee, racing motorist, who plans to do some racing in the United States.

Oh, Dear, a Pair of Highway Bandits

Imagine yourself seated comfortably in your car, riding through Richmond Park, London. You stop for a traffic light or something, and suddenly, through the open car window, you find yourself confronted by the antlered heads of two deer. Scared? Well, London motorists are used to being peacefully held up by these tame and graceful animals, who beg for tidbits—candy or cookies.

Back in Limelight

Peggy Lawton Rich, former Follies girl, who was recently in the court spotlight when she fought her former husband's divorce action, is back in legal atmosphere again. Peggy is now suing Madison Square Garden and the Rangers' hockey team for $50,000. She charges she was seriously injured when struck by a hockey stick while a spectator at a game in December, 1931.

John D. Back on Links

Despite his 93 years, John D. Rockefeller, oil magnate, can still get distance with his driver. The aged financier is shown here during his first game of the season at Ormond Beach, Fla., where he invariably spends the Winter. The drive made by Mr. Rockefeller as this picture was made went off the fairway and almost landed in his automobile.

Last Lap of Five-Year Task

Dean Cornwall, celebrated artist, working on the world's largest series of murals, is shown sketching in the California desert for the twelfth and last of the huge paintings. The last painting will be forty feet square and its completion will mark the end of a task that has taken five years. The murals are for the Los Angeles Public Library.
