SHIELDS

The friends in this community carried out a complete surprise on Miss Margaret Shoemaker at the home of Ed. Early, Monday evening, it being her twenty-first birthday. About 30 were invited and the hours were most delightfully whiled away at various games.

A very attractive program had been planned that created a very enjoyable evening. At about the usual time, refreshments were served, followed by a social hour. Many reminiscences of the past and present were indulged in. Joseph Yegge gave a very interesting talk on the pioneer life of the first settlers in northwestern Canada. One couldn't believe such hardship ever existed unless it came from a source of this kind. Mr. Yegge grew up in this neighborhood from a boy and having a good deal of hard luck during the depression, losing his homestead in Canada. He concluded he was getting too far along in years to continue this hardship much longer. After this short talk we all returned to the parlor where the young folks sang numerous songs, accompanied by the piano.

At the closing Miss Shoemaker was the recipient of many nice gifts, all wishing her many happy returns of the day. She was a passenger on the Burlington to Plainview Tuesday morning, where she will visit a few days with relatives and friends.

Local Leader Wins Trip
Glen E. White, of Amelia, was awarded a Burlington Leadership trip to the 1933 Club Week to be held on the College of Agriculture Campus in June. L. I. Frisbie, State 4-H Club Leader announced the awards last Thursday.

The Burlington Railway offers this trip to the high ranking leader in each county through which their line runs. The prize is equivalent to railroad transportation and one fourth of the registration fee for the week's activities.

Mr. White has led the Thrifty Baby Beef Club for the past three years and was re-elected this year. He will also serve as leader of a rope club.

Leader's Meetings Well Attended
Seventy-six men and women attended the two leader's meetings at Atkinson and Ewing last week. Leona Davis, Assistant State Extension Agent, demonstrated canning pork. A hog was cut up by the County Agent. It was cut to secure the largest amount of meat for roasting, canning and curing. A discussion of curing practices was given by the Agent.

Early Hatching Pays the Poultryman
Pullets from early hatched chicks begin laying early in the fall and reach maximum production during the season when eggs are likely to be the highest price. This is one of the most important reasons for hatching chicks early, says the Nebraska College of Agriculture. Experience has shown that early hatched chicks are usually easier to raise, better layers, better breeders, and better market birds, which results in making them more profitable than later chicks.

A higher percentage of hatchability is usually obtained from eggs produced before the hens reach their peak of production. The high point of production ordinarily occurs in March and April. Some poultrymen also prefer to begin hatching eggs early in order to get the maximum use of their incubator and brooding equipment.
