KNIGHTHOOD OF YOUTH Closing Thoughts

As the end of the present year draws near there are a few suggestions you may like to consider at your club meeting.

Have you thought of electing officers to serve at the beginning of the school year next fall? This would make it possible to begin your club work the first week of school without having to delay it until after the election of officers. The newly elected officers might enjoy making plans during the summer for interesting club activities another year.

You may like to discuss planning a school fair for next fall so that club members would be encouraged to carry on spare time activities during the summer. You will find an explanation of such a fair on pages 69-71 of the Club Guide.

Some of the clubs will continue meeting once a week during the summer. In some districts, the teacher, if she lives in the community, plans to act as sponsor. In other places the club is being advised by a mother or an older brother or sister.

Home adventures, both carrying out responsibilities and forming habits are discussed at the summer meetings. Spare time work is an important part of these meetings—various things are made, scrap books, are completed and book reports are given.

Summer time is a pleasant time of the year to go on nature hikes. Interesting programs can be given because girls and boys have time to prepare them. Many original songs, plays and poems have been written and presented at summer clubs in the past. The summer club may consist of all the members of the regular school clubs or of as many members as can manage to attend. Reports of the work of the summer club may be given at the school fair in the fall, or if there is no fair, at an early club meeting. Club recognition should then be given for summer work and recordings be made on the individual castles. Let us close our school year with definite plans of some kind for the summer and next fall.

"It's a good thing we had the telephone to call your Daddy!"

An experience that brought home to this family the priceless value of their telephone.....

A woman went to the home of her son to take care of her grandchild, less than a year old, while her son and his wife were away.

After they had left, she began to feel ill. She telephoned her son, who came home and found his mother unconscious. With treatment she revived.

Had there been no telephone, it might have been hours before she was discovered. And the baby would have been in danger, too, because there was no one else in the house to look after him.

Any moment some emergency may arise—the home with a telephone is protected—help can be called at once.
