

'GOOD OLD DAYS' MUCH LIKE OURS

Even Red Tinted Toenails Are Not New.

The first sunken bathtub was in the great bathroom attached to the palace of Khaiz...

"The good old days," those, for the lady who likes to sing in her tub!

The slaves had to be dragged into it, of course, because there would not have been any water if they weren't there to haul it from well or dale...

If anyone thinks our beach girls are up and coming on oils for the body, they should know there wasn't any reason for this rite in the good old days of which we speak.

Miss Hayes' research led to the discovery that a certain well-known idol of the "movies" didn't first think about that fine tweezed and elongated eyebrow of hers.

Recently we've seen a movement to get women to wear artificial finger nails. That isn't such a new idea, either, according to our informant.

As for the red tinted toenails we may see on any beach today, that was old stuff when Cleopatra was a baby.

Ah, if Only!

We care not who makes the nation's songs if we could make the laws to suppress some of the songs.

WARNING GIVEN TO AID FAWNS

Yosemite, Cal. —(UP)— Yosemite park visitors are warned not to touch fawns found lying in the grass because the human scent may lead the does to desert their offspring.

Sam King, park ranger told of precautions nature had taken to protect the young and helpless animals.

"Fawns are odorless and have camouflage spots the color of the forest floor as protection while they are too young to run," King said.

"They remain odorless for six weeks, so that coyotes and bear cannot scent them. If they are discovered, it is by observation."

Utah Farmers Warned Of 'Old Paper' Racket

Logan, Utah. —(UP)— The revival of an old racket intended to fleece the farmer has been reported by William Peterson of Utah State Agricultural college and manager of the Federal Agricultural Adjustment Act for Utah.

New Type of Boat Tested on Delaware

Swarthmore, Pa. —(UP)— A new form of motor boat, which "flies" over the water, has been perfected by Dr. Oskar G. Tietjens.

The new boat, known as a hydrofoi, has a sort of steel belly-band rigged beneath the hull, upon which the craft lifts itself from the water. In tests on the Delaware river, the boat attained a speed of 24 miles an hour.

When the boat is not in motion, the hydrofoi is submerged. As the speed increases, the craft gradually leaves the water until only the steel band and a tiny fin in the rear is touching the surface of the water.

Dr. Tietjens, a graduate of Goettingen University and now a research engineer for the Westinghouse Company, thinks the hydrofoi can be installed on all types of yachts and motor cruisers.

Bridgeport Mayor Fed Up On Magazine "Cracks"

Bridgeport, Conn. —(UP)— What with one crack and another, Mayor Edward T. Buckingham, of Bridgeport, is getting pretty tired of it all.

Nina Wilcox Putnam started it when writing of London.

"Some days London is beautiful. Other days it looks like Bridgeport, Conn.," wrote Miss Putnam. Walter O'Keefe, in a Broadway production, followed with the remark that "Bridgeport is Hollywood without the potted palms."

The final straw was from the pen of Theodore Pratt, writing of the city of Palma, Island of Mallorca, in a recent American Mercury article which also stirred the natives of Mallorca. Said Pratt:

Canada Will Continue Back-to-Land Movement

Montreal, Canada —(UP)— The Quebec Government aided by the Federal Government and Quebec municipalities, will continue its back-to-land movement started last year.

It is understood that the provincial government plans to establish at least 250 unemployed families on farms in rural districts in the northwest of the province soon. They will be recruited from cities where the three-party arrangement is in force.

Under the scheme, each colonist will receive a grant of $600, of which $500 will be received the

PEASANTS TAKE FERTILE LANDS

Rostov-on don, U. S. S. R. —(UP)— Thousands of peasants brought up on bleak Far Northern farmlands are adjusting themselves to their new surroundings in fertile Kuban. They have fallen heir to rich grain land from which "class enemies" were expelled to sub-Arctic Regions, especially in the four Cossack settlements from which practically the entire population was exiled.

A spokesman of the new settlers addressed a recent gathering of collective farm stock-brigadiers of North Caucasus. He declared that the newcomers are determined to establish model collectives where anti-Soviet and kulak elements formerly dominated.

"We were indignant," he said, "to find how the mad kulaks ruined the beautiful Kuban soil. The remnants of kulaks even tried to provoke the newly-settled peasants to undermine the spring sowing. To this, however, we responded by cleaning out the weeds from soil spoiled by wreckers, and in general by militant preparations for the sowings."

ITALIAN KING'S HERMIT DEAD

Ischia, Italy —(UP)— Host to the king of Italy, Fra' Giovanni, 90-year-old hermit of the highest mountain on the island Mount Epomeo, has died. His choice collection included an autographed photograph of the king.

The sovereign made the trip to Mount Epomeo years ago and gladly accepted the hermit's humble cave as shelter when a shower surprised the excursionists. "I gave King Victor Emmanuel III some of my bread," Fra' Giovanni would relate, "and I saw him eat it then and there — with my own eyes."

He was extremely popular to the hundreds of tourists, who flocked to this island during the last 75 years. But above all, Fra' Giovanni is really mourned by the native children who often climbed to his mountain haunts.

He had a surprising memory and visitors, if they were lucky, revelled at his tales of bygone days when, in the old man's own words: "I was somebody, believe me!"

No one truly managed to learn why Fra' Giovanni ever retired from civilized life. Some said the reason was to be found in a love affair which had gone sour in his adventurous youth. Others preferred that he was unceasingly penitent because of a fortune squandered in gambling.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Bleaching is one of the steps on the stairway to beauty.

A way to whiten, and bleach the skin is one of the most frequent questions asked a beauty editor. Usually the question is followed by a sentence expressing a desire to know about a bleach that is inexpensive.

Of course, there are many prepared bleaches. They are specially made for bleaching and contain ingredients which whiten the complexion. If you can find one which suits your purpose — and your pocketbook — by all means use it. If not, there are some simple home bleaches which will aid you in your desire for a whiter skin.

Everyone knows that lemon juice is a good bleach for the hands and elbows. Keep a piece of it on your sink and use it when you have finished the dishes. Keep another piece in the bathroom to be used on your elbows.

Fresh, crushed strawberries have a tendency to bleach your skin.

Cucumber juice and rind is an excellent bleach. Save the skin from a cucumber and put it in a bowl, covered with water. In the ice box until you are ready to use it.

After your face has been cleaned, saturate a clean piece of cotton with the cucumber juice. Now put the pieces of peelings on your face, cover them with the cloth and lie down for half an hour.

You'll be surprised at the difference in the color of your complexion after a few cucumber bleaching treatments.

English Setter Underwent Tonsil Operation

Coe Cob, Conn. —(UP)— "Jep," a six-year-old English setter, is in an enviable position in dog circles here, for he has a medical operation to his credit.

When C. Carlton Killey, "Jep's" owner, noticed the dog seemed to have contracted rheumatism he took him to a veterinarian. A case of bad tonsils, was the diagnosis and so "Jep" went on the operating table and under ether.

With the tonsils out "Jep" is recovering and the leanness is disappearing.

Wild Turkey Flew Through Windshield

Alexandria, La. —(UP)— As a weapon for hunting wild turkey, an automobile windshield is effective, but William Eagles of Winnfield parish prefers a shotgun.

A large wild turkey flew against the glass of his car while he was driving in the country, and became game for Eagles' pot. The windshield was broken, the bird was stunned, and Eagles was upset for a few moments, but averted an accident. He took the fowl home and had turkey stew.

Pine Beetle Menace Reported Checked

Medford, Ore. —(UP)— Pine beetles which have menaced the virgin stands of nine species of trees in Crater Lake National park will be completely checked this year, government insect control experts predict.

Reforestation workers will cut down 12,000 trees, strip the bark and burn or otherwise destroy the eggs and larvae of the pine borers which have made great inroads on the living timber in the park area.

Connecticut Installs Police Teletype System

Hartford, Conn. —(UP)— An efficient state-wide teletype system, which will make the spreading of a police alarm an easy matter, now is being installed in Connecticut.

The center of the network of wires will be the State Motor Vehicle department. Service will be on a 24-hour basis, and there will be connections with similar systems in Massachusetts, and New York.

Poilu Finds Daughter On Eve of Her Wedding

Lille, France —(UP)— A baby girl abandoned 14 years ago by her mother, when the latter was forced to flee for life from the approaching enemy, has been found by her father on the eve of her wedding day.

Mlle. Madeline Colette Rollet—her real name—was adopted and brought up as a "regular" member of the family of her foster parents. She attained the age of 18 and was betrothed when her own father succeeded in locating her.

After demobilization Rollet tried to find his family but succeeded only in establishing that his wife was dead. It was merely by chance that he traced his child to her present address.

Sea Lion Won Battle With Huge Octopus

DePoe Bay, Ore. —(UP)— A death struggle between a huge octopus and a sea lion, won by the latter, presented a thrilling spectacle to visitors at DePoe bay recently.

The battle took place near the shore and veracity of the story was backed by scores of witnesses. The sea lion disabled his adversary by tearing off its tentacles, later devouring it at leisure.

Out Our Way

Practical Joke of Jail Inmates Irritated Judge

Salt Lake City, Utah —(UP)— Bert Ivie, 50-year-old resident of Shelby, Id., charged with failure to support his three children, discovered that City Judge Vere L. McCarthy is not a member of the "Royal Order of Sweating Fish."

Victim of practical jokers, Ivie entered the courtroom full of confidence, after fellow prisoners told him that the judge was a member of the Sweating Fish, a jailhouse organization to which Ivie had recently been initiated.

"Are you Mr. Ivie?" the clerk asked as the prisoner arose.

"I'm a little fish, son of a big fish of the Royal Order of Sweating Fish," Ivie responded. "No matter how far a fish swims, he never sweats. Keno, brother!"

Judge McCarthy rebuked the prisoner but Ivie simply replied "Keno brother," to every subsequent question.

Irritated, the judge was about to impose a contempt of court sentence, when an attache apprised the court that Ivie was the victim of practical jokers of the select jail circle.
