JUDGE MORRISSEY DEAD Andrew M. Morrissey, formerly chief justice of the Nebraska state supreme court, and well and favorably known in this city, died last Friday afternoon at the home of his brother, Charles, in Lincoln, at the age of 61 years. Judge Morrissey had many friends in this section of the state as he formerly resided and practiced law at Valentine and was a frequent visitor to this city. The following notice of his death is taken from the Lincoln State Journal: "Judge Andrew M. Morrissey, former chief justice of the Nebraska supreme court, died at 10:30 p. m. Friday at the home of his brother, Charles, 1012 So. 14th. Since last May he had been with the treasury department at Washington, D. C., serving as an attorney for the comptroller of the currency.

"Judge Morrissey, who was 61 years old, was taken ill at Washington the first part of last August, suffering a nervous prostration while about his duties. He was brought to Lincoln Aug. 20 and had been in critical condition, Bronchial influenza, which he developed two weeks ago, was the cause of death.

"His physician said Judge Morrissey was critically ill also in the fall a year ago, having suffered a breakdown at that time. He had recovered, however, but was in poor health afterward.

"Judge Morrissey was appointed chief justice of the Nebraska supreme court in 1915 by Congressman Morehead, who was governor at that time. The appointment was made on Jan. 21 of that year and in November of 1916 Judge Morrissey was re-elected. He was re-elected again in November of 1920, but was defeated for re-election in 1926.

"After leaving the supreme court bench, he entered the practice of law at Omaha with Arthur F. Mullen, now national democratic committeeman, as his law partner. The partnership existed until Judge Morrissey's death. He had made his home at Omaha since that time.

"Born at Livonia, N. Y., Dec. 27, 1871, Judge Morrissey came to Nebraska in 1890. He received his common school education in New York and began his legal education in 1896 after completing a term as deputy clerk of Dawes county.

"He began the practice of law at Valentine in the spring of 1898. He was soon elected county attorney of Cherry county, and served from January, 1899, until 1903. He declined re-election at the end of the second term and established a law partnership with Judge F. M. Walcott and practiced law at Valentine until 1911, when he came to Lincoln and formed a partnership with Frank M. Tyrrell. Judge Morrissey previously had practiced law for a short time at Chadron.

"After practicing law in Lincoln for two years Judge Morrissey was chosen private secretary by Congressman Morehead at the beginning of the latter's term as governor. In 1915, Judge Morrissey was appointed deputy attorney general by Willis E. Reed, then attorney general.

"He was a member of the Second Nebraska regiment in the Spanish-American war. He was a Roman Catholic and was a member of Lincoln lodge, K. of C. He also was a member of the Nebraska State Bar association and the American Law institute.

"When the American Bar association went to London in 1924 as guests of the lawyers of Great Britain, Judge Morrissey was selected as one of the American orators to deliver an address in London. He taught at Northwestern university during the summer of 1924.
