INMAN NEWS

On account of illness the Inman correspondent was unable to get the "Inman News" into the paper last week.

Little Sammy Ticknor was brought home from the hospital at O'Neill Saturday evening, much improved. He is now recovering rapidly.

Mrs. Walt Jacox is quite ill at her home in the south part of town.

Frank Brady, of Atkinson, who is running for the nomination for State Senator, on the republican ticket, was in Inman Monday interviewing the voters.

Miss Alice French, candidate for the nomination for County Superintendent was here from Page Tuesday visiting among friends.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Wilcox and daughter, Emma Jane, and son, Billie, left Monday for Medford, Ore., where they will visit a sister of Mrs. Wilcox. They are also looking for a location in the west.

Elmer, Roy and Earl Killinger, of Wolbach, Nebr., arrived here Thursday and visited until Saturday at the home of their uncle, George Killinger.

Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Vargison and children, of Basset, are here visiting her mother, Mrs. Minnie Crosser, and other relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Hanlon and sons, Wayne and Marlin, Mrs. Loyal Hull and son, Donald, and daughter, Lois, and Mrs. Charles Hancock and son, Warren, of O'Neill, were visitors at the home of Mrs. Mary Hancock Monday evening.

Prof. Walter French and his male quartette composed of boys from his Sunday school class at Mead, Nebr., were here Sunday, and had charge of the morning service at the M. E. church. The personell of the quartette is: Gene Anderson, first tenor; John Nelson, second tenor; Harvey Weidman, baritone, and Howard Johnson, bass. The boys are splendid singers and presented a splendid gospel message in song and spoken word. The church was filled to capacity and every one greatly enjoyed the service. Prof. French presided at the piano. Mrs. French and children were also here for the service.

Ermond Keyes, who was injured in a hay stacker accident several days ago, is getting along nicely. The fracture in his right leg was much more serious than thought at first. Although Ermond suffered greatly at first, he is resting quite easily at this time.

The Union service was held on the L. D. S. church lawn Sunday evening. Mr. Peacock led the song service, and Rev. Mertie E. Clute, of the Methodist church, delivered a splendid message to the large congregation. F. H. Outhouse of the L. D. S. church offered the prayer. These services are proving very successful and helpful. Rev. Peacock, of the Pentecostal faith, will bring the message next Sunday evening.

PLEASANT DALE

northwestern counties. The bait is being paid for with federal emergency relief funds. The federal government is waiting to spend $118,000 to fight livestock diseases in Nebraska, but cooperation has not yet been pledged by the governor. The work would cost the state nothing.

A group of CWA art pictures has been chosen by the governor to hang in the executive mansion at Lincoln. They include a water color, "Nebraska Cottonwood," by Ernest Rose of Omaha; a number of etchings by Lyman Byxhe of Omaha, and four paintings including "The Blizzard of '88" by Sarah Green of Lincoln. The pictures were exhibited at the Joslyn Memorial at Omaha during July.

Economic Highlights

As was anticipated, the appearance of summer brought definite declines in business activity. Early in July steel ingot production dropped from 62 to 40, and automobiles slid from 82 to 39. During ensuing weeks automobile production recovered somewhat, while steel stayed down.

There is nothing extraordinary in this. But the question is being asked, "Where are we going in business?" In other words, have we dropped to a "permanently lower level" or will activity rebound shortly to the levels of May and June?

In answering that question, various business observers are a long way from agreement. The Annalist, for example, which is a conservative authority, and is inimical to many important Administration measures, tends to the belief that only part of the loss will be recovered, and that the future of business is clouded with doubt. Other agencies of information are more encouraging, although a highly cautious note is evident in most pronouncements and forecasts. Experts are uncertain, and as a result they are avoiding, as much as possible, definite guesses as to coming events in the business world.

This much, however, seems definite: Progress of recovery generally has been disappointingly slow. The new federal bureaus, including the NRA, have not been able to accomplish as much as was hoped. The picture is inevitably confused by government spending—no one knows how much of the rise in business achieved since two years ago, is due to artificial stimulation of this sort and how much to genuine recovery. It is an obvious fact that if the government puts out billions for one kind or another of relief—and all the special activities, from building of dams to the CCC camps fall under that relief heading—sales of all types of products are bound to rise. It is not equally obvious what will happen when the government is forced to slow down or stop this kind of spending, as no one knows to what extent private enterprise will be able to take up the load.

Conservative business is again faced with renewed demands for inflation, and for the issuance of fiat money. The Economists' National Committee on Monetary Policy forecasts that with the convening of the next Congress, the President will attempt to further devalue the dollar and issue more currency against our gold reserve. Results would be problematical—one person's view is about as good as another's in this regard—but it would undoubtedly cause much uncertainty during the devaluing process.

In brief, business is suffering from the summer drop plus labor troubles, and there is doubt as to whether it will be able to recover at normal speed. One good sign is that the strikes seem closer to settlement—but the labor problem, important as it is, is but one of many issues industry must face. We are entering a crucial period and events of the next half-dozen months will show where we, as an industrial nation, are going.

The much opposed, much defended, Reciprocal Tariff Bill, which gives the President the unchecked power to make agreements with foreign nations whereby we will lower the tariff on their goods by as much as 50 per cent, passed the last Congress. On July 23 the machinery it created went into motion for the first time, when negotiations for a reciprocal treaty with Cuba were started.

No piece of legislation of the last two years is more far-reaching than the tariff bill, or more potentially important. The Administration plans to use it in a vast effort to rehabilitate world trade, break the international commercial deadlock that is now tying up the ports of the world, and make the tariff an instrument in restoring prosperity.

The problems the Administration faces in doing this are of the greatest and most involved kind. For example, debts and currencies, most debated of subjects, contributed to the trade collapse—they are inextricably involved in trade revival. Perhaps more important still, is the growth of nationalistic feeling which has stirred up much ill will between most of the great powers. At any rate, this and other countries will move very slowly in negotiating trade treaties. Early agreements will cover but a few commodities. More sweeping agreements, relating to all types of products, will come later.

Whatever the result, it is a vital and interesting experiment. If the United States succeeds in bringing back world trade, all powers will owe it a debt.

To stimulate recovery and employment, the Administration is pinning great hopes on its new housing bill, which will go into operation shortly. Under it, a part of mortgage loans are guaranteed and interest rates lowered—it is thus supposed to benefit both lender and borrower. Its proponents believe it will liberate $1,500,000,000 of private capital and provide employment for millions.

Excavation Shows Holt County Was Once The Home of Many Indians

himself and at the same time to do his country a big favor. The Indians went out and pounded all the fight out of the boys under General Crook and the general had to admit the wild boys had him outguessed in every way.

After this contest, the Indian fighters used their heads and refused to hang around and wait for some other force to come along and make them bite the dust. They took to woods, valleys, hills and anywhere, scattering so no force could do much toward giving them punishment. They hid out as only the coyote and Indian know how to do.

It became the task of the men under General Terry to get after the wild boys and give them the worst the whites could offer. The general cut the men under him to two units and started the quest for the outlaws whose skins sorely were needed to bring peace and safety to a wide area.

Benteen, Custer and Reno, white leaders, and a great number of seasoned soldiers, made a start with cavalry to a point said to have been the confluence of the Little and Big Horn rivers. The force crept along slowly, remembering that the Indians were as wide awake as possible and ready for a thrust they had hoped should be final as far as the "white trash" was concerned.

Along toward the middle of that summer, white scouts dropped into camp and nonchalantly stated that they located a number of Sioux or Sioux or Cheyenne on the Little Big Horn river.

Further observations gave the impression the parcel was not the enemy but a band of more than 100 of Indians of some friendly tribe or nation. That belief caused somewhat of a change of feeling and any preparation for imp-
