No Financial Santa Claus

One of the greatest obstacles in the way of curing the growing tax problem is the ancient human desire to get something for nothing. That desire is at the forefront, in times such as the present when vast sums are being spent for direct relief and for public works projects. Practically every state is making an effort to obtain a larger share of federal funds than neighboring commonwealths. One of the most potent "sales talks" of high state officials is that they have been instrumental in obtaining federal grants for their constituents.

The idea has gotten around that this money is "free." And so it is—to the extent that the state pays nothing for it directly. Yet every cent of the money comes from the federal treasury—it is made possible by federal borrowings which are secured by liens on every enterprise, every piece of property, every investment in the nation. Interest payments on the bonds must be obtained through taxation—and when the time for amortization comes the money must also be raised by taxing the public.

Generally speaking, the federal grants are proportioned to states on the basis of population, the percentage of needy being about the same in one part of the country as another. As a result, the people of the various states will have to pay back the money they get precisely as they would if it were secured by state bonds. The only advantage the federal government has in borrowing money at a slightly lower interest rate than a state.

This is not to argue that relief isn't necessary—it is. But it is also a fact that states are obtaining money for luxury projects which they do not need, and whose contribution to the welfare of the people is far less than it should be, in the light of their cost. Once the public learns that no one in history has managed to devise a way of getting something for nothing, it will demand that the states, as a whole, stop looking for a financial Santa Claus, and use more common sense.

FOR A SAFE HOLIDAY SEASON

The Holiday Season is designed to bring joy and happiness—but it likewise brings with it a vast amount of preventable misery, because of the accident toll. The gravity of the problem is magnified by the fact that a large percentage of Holiday accidents involve children. Hundreds of them are killed and thousands are needlessly injured every December.

Here are a few rules, issued by the National Safety Council, to help pass a safe and happy Christmas season:

Don't permit children to play in the streets—the old practice of hitching sleds to automobiles is especially hazardous.

Be extremely cautious in the matter of ice-skating—ice must be at least four inches thick before it can be trusted to sustain a large group.

Winter brings special automobile hazards, such as ice and snow, poor visibility and soft highway shoulders. Remember them—and drive accordingly.

Don't use candles on your Christmas Tree—don't put it near a stove—don't use inflammable trimmings—don't permit it to dry out in the house after Christmas—don't fail to anchor it firmly—don't use light bulbs of greater strength than one firefly candlepower.

These little hints are simple enough—there's nothing but common sense behind them, and they will cost nothing, in either time or money, to follow. And they may be the means of saving the lives of loved ones.

Among the recent suggestion intended for the next legislature to consider is a proposition offered by Dwight Felton, secretary of agriculture and inspection, who would require brewers, importers, wholesalers and distributors to make monthly reports of beer sales for taxing purposes. He declares that under the existing system wherein 3,500 dealers over the state submit monthly reports, inaccuracies and misunderstandings in the reports occur at an expense to the state inspection department.

Former State Senator A. A. Bowring of Merriman, president of the Nebraska good roads association, intends to have introduced in the legislature a ton-mile levy tax on trucks so that these vehicles will carry a large part of road costs. Bowring is the author of the present 4-cent gasoline tax law.

Nebraska code bodies intend to urge state legislation creating a state recovery law to empower state courts to share the federal burden of enforcing NRA codes.
