WHAT'S DOING IN THE LEGISLATURE

but helped to enliven legislative proceedings last week, with a good time enjoyed by all but Representative Cone and Foster May, a Lincoln radio announcer.

The first fracas which turned out to be something of a dud, due to the interference of the sergeant at arms, started when Cone, the legislature's official hell-raiser, made a remark which Hanthorn, of Superior, about Cone's age, took to be insulting to Mrs. Stark of Norfolk, one of the two women members of the law-making body. Hanthorn jumped up and started for Cone but was held off by Sergeant-at-Arms George Kirk.

A day or so later, however, Dr. Lucien A. Stark, husband of the legislator in question, blew into town and warned Cone to stop insulting Mrs. Stark. Cone called in the sergeant-at-arms to protect him.

The other exhibition highlight of the week came when Representative Rasdal, of Ogallala grabbed KFOR's official "newscaster" by the collar and hustled him out of the legislative hall after the announcer allegedly implied that radio equipment was barred from the house floor because members were saying things they didn't want the folks back home to hear. Incidentally, the house recinded its order barring the radio from the floor the day after the announcer ejection affair, and the liquor debate was on the ether in fine style.

A plan is afoot in the legislature to build a model state farm at the old Genoa Indian school which the state last week accepted from the federal government. A special appropriation of approximately $10,000 to equip the 625 acres for cultivation has been asked from the legislature.

Approximately $4,000 would be spent for horses and more than $5,000 for machinery.

The house state institutions committee has approved utilization of the Indian school property to relieve crowded conditions at other state institutions. Establishment of a canning plant for processing fruits and vegetables raised at the other state institutions also is recommended.

The plan now being considered calls for intensified irrigation farming at Genoa, and the transfer to that place of all able bodied wards who could be used at farming and canning from other institutions.
