A snake is so repulsive dirt will not stick to it, yet a few humans find pleasure, maybe profit, in handling the clammy creatures bare handed.

An addition is being built to the dwelling at the Fryrear farm three miles west of Amelia.

Not many cattle from here are going to market as pastures are good and the beves are putting on large layers of steak.

The handle used in letting the ordinary windmill in and out of gear appear harmless enough. When released from its moorings to let fly at will it may have an effect similar to the kick of a Missouri mule. So Mrs. George Withers has discovered. A hard blow in the side from this source proved a painful experience and the effect continued to be felt for some days.

The school meeting in district No. 243 was peaceful and brief. The district got thru the year with a cash balance of $96.43, no outstanding warrants. The usual eleven were present and voting, the minutes of the last year's meeting showing just the same number voting. Howard Berry was continued as director, $375 voted for next year and an eight months term.

Citizens hereabouts are being amused if not edified by a medicine show at Amelia. Blake Ott profited to the extent of a box of groceries one evening from the exhibition aggregation by outlasting all others in a contest to see who could hang on to a brick the longest, suspended at arm's length.

Casper Addison, of Central Swan precinct, accompanied by his Nephew, Ralph Taylor, visited Monday at the Saunders home. Ralph boarded the Atkinson mail car returning to the home of his grandfather, John Addison, a pioneer of the Mineola country. John has resided 54 years on the place he homesteaded, except a short time that he lived at Page, and knows the history of Northeast Holt as few new surviving do. Casper, a son of John, remained for a longer visit with these early friends of the family. He, with his wife and two children, moved here a year ago.

THOMAS EUGENE MCKENZIE

Thomas Eugene McKenzie was born at Havanna, Ohio, Jan. 11, 1858, from parents of Scotch Irish descent. Being left an orphan at an early age, he went to live with an uncle, Peter Winn, with whom he remained until after removing to Holt county in 1882 when he settled on a homestead and went on his own.

He was a pioneer of the old school. Breaking the virgin prairie with oxen and weathering the blizzards, droughts and the grasshoppers. It is difficult to grasp the full meanings of the friendships that were formed on these prairies. The writer, being of the younger generation, missed many of the trials and hardships, but being intimately acquainted with him for over 25 years became familiar with all he endured in helping to make the country what it is today. McKenzie and I were friends, this friendship was created in our being associated with one another under conditions that try the souls of men and it never dies. Let no man be so unkind as to speak a word unkindly of Tom McKenzie. He is gone. I never heard him speak unkindly of any man. I know he was a man without any fear only of Almighty God and the temptation to do wrong.

Tom, we will all miss you. We will miss the home that never knew a lock and where the latch string was always out, and where a deserving man was never turned away. Come then Holy One, sweet messenger of rest and bear away, upon thy snowy wings to the celestial clime the soul of the noblest creature of his time. Green be the grass above his grave and may the winter snow fall lightly thereon. Good by old friend, may God bless you. Lloyd Gallagher.
