The little town of Heron River is eagerly awaiting the arrival of Anna ("Silver") Grenoble, daughter of "Gentleman Jim," formerly of the community, but known as a gambler, news of whose recent murder in Chicago has reached the town. Sophronia Willard, Jim Grenoble's sister, with whom the girl is to live, is at the depot to meet her. Sophronia's household consists of her husband, and stepsons, Roderick and Jason. The Willards own only half of the farm on which they live, the other half being Anna Grenoble's. On Silver's arrival Duke Melbank, shiftless youth, makes him-self obnoxious. Roderick is on the eve of marriage to Corinne Meader, daughter of a failed banker. Silver declares her eagerness to live on the farm, and says she has no intention of selling her half, which the Willards had feared. She meets Roddy, by chance, that night. He is somewhat distant. Silver tells Sophronia ("Phronie," by request) somethingbut by no means all-of her rela-tions with Gerald Lucas, gambler friend of her father.

"They're all in there, too. That corn he grew last year was two weeks earlier than anything else in the district. Now he's crossin' it with a good yielder to bring it up to where it'll grow as much to the acre as the other stuff. Oh, I don't pretend to know half of what he's talkin' about, let alone what he's doin'."

Jason came down the slope from the barn, and Silver slipped out to fetch Roddy.

She stood hesitantly for a moment in the open doorway of his workshop, and watched him where he bent over a long plank table. On rinne's hand. "Welcome home," each of a half dozen white pasteboard cards on the table there was eyes. a sprinkling of what seemed to be corn kernels, and so intent was

"We must go up and meet them Jason," said Silver.

But her eyes lingered a moment longer on Corinne, Roddy's wife. She was small and exquisitely formed, with negligible trinkets of feet, and a scantily hatted little head poised eagerly as she went forward to accept Sophronia's blundering kiss and old Roderick's handclasp.

A painful sound came from Jason's throat. "Lord !" he muttered. "I could cry. Corinne has no idea what she's-"

"Oh, Jason," Silver protested, "it will be all right. When people are in love-they can adjust themselves to anything."

"We've got to be d-n nice to her. Silver. The poor little thing !" Everybody was in the living room when Silver and Jason entered the new house. Roddy, with only a trace of self-consciousness, brought Corinne, with his arm linked in hers, up to his brother and Silver while they stood in the doorway.

"You've met Jason, Corrie," he said. "This is Silver Grenoble, Silver-Corinne. Did I get it backwards? I usually do; remember, Corrie? She used to laugh at my manners, you know, Silver. But what's manners between friends?" He laughed, and Silver extended her hand to Corinne, who took it with a quaint little move upward

"I'm sorry to disturb you, Roddy," Silver said, "but supper's ready." "Oh !" He glanced up absently.

Then his gaze seemed to become arrested apon her; but she knew that it was the concentrated stare of a person whose thoughts are hard on something else. "That ought to work!" he exclaimed under his breath, and she saw him go to a fil ing cabinet in a corner, remove a sheaf of papers and jot down some memorandum,

Silver was about to turn away when he called her.

"Why don't you come in and look this place over?" he inquired. "Girls are usually bored with itbut since you have an interest in it-" He laughed in an odd way and came toward her.

"I'd love to know all about it." she said as she glanced around the room. "But Phronie is waiting for us. Couldn't we come in later?"

"Well," he replied apologetically, "I've got to go to town for a haircut-and I have my packing to do yet tonight. But Jason can show you around," he went on hastily.

They had come to the screen door of the kitchen, and Jason opened it for them.

"You don't seem to be in any hurry to come to the 'last supper,' " Jason remarked drily.

"None of your irreverence, young man !" Roddy cried, and prodded his brother jovially in the ribs. "You plaited in a coronet across her have a serious job on your hands tonight. You've got to show this child my lair-and your own. Her mind has a scientific as well as an artistic turn-eh. what, Silver?"

He grasped the soft coil of hair at the nape of her neck and gave it a playful tug.

A misty sensation of gratitude, of deep, quivering happiness pervaded Silver as she partook of the simple meal with these people who were, through Sophronia, closer to her than anyone else on earth. But far down, underneath, there was a stirring of something uncertain, something winged and light and strange. She found herself wondering, time after time, what kind of person Roddy Willard would bring home as his wife.

"My G-d!" Jason said, peering out through the muslin curtains of the sitting room in the old house. "They have a retinoo !"

Silver, standing at his elbow, looked at the people getting out of Roddy's car. She clasped Jason's arms.

Jason," she said. "Phronie told me with shrinking eyes. Corinne was small.'

"Sure," he replied. "That's Corinne with the fox fur on. Kind o' with us?" warm for it, but I guess it's the style. She's pretty, isn't she? But Roddy's temples. that other one-say! She looks like a Mackintosh Red!"

pleaded. "May I be excused? I feel so very gritty-all I want is a good hot bath."

Sophronia's face fell in disappointment. Silver had helped her make the fancy molds of fruit gelatine that had reposed all day in the cooler. She knew, too, how long Phronie had labored over the deviled eggs and the special mayonnaise dressing, not to mention the angel cake with its greeting in pink icing on the top.

"Maybe you'll feel more like having a bite after you've washed?" Phronie suggested hopefully.

Corinne shook her head mournfully. "I'm so sorry, Mrs. Willard. It has been so hot driving today. Oh-Roddy! Paula went upstairs with our bags, didn't she? Perhaps she would like something to eat. Do you mind calling her?" Then in a hasty aside she added, "We picked her up only this afternoon in an employment office in Maynard, but I suspect she's a jewel."

Paula entered the living room, and while Corinne, playfully democratic, introduced her to Silver and Jason, Silver found her interest quickened by the German girl's appearance. She was Junoesque in

"That's fortunate," Roddy interrupted Mrs. Folds, and laughed aloud. With that he slammed shut the covers of the ledger, flung it with a sharp report down upon the table and strode through the dining room into the kitchen.

Mrs. Folds smiled feebly and extended two fingers to Corinne. As though across waves of heat, Silver saw Mrs. Folds sail out of the house Corinne accompanying her.

"I'm going for a walk," she told Jason.

"A walk?" he asked, and frowned. But Silver broke away and started for the road. She thrust her hands into the pockets of her sweatvaguely troubled look, then dropped er and walked blindly into the last sinking glow of the sunset.

Presently a long, graceful roadster turned the corner and came toway, and Corinne went to answer ward her. As it slowed down and stopped beside her, the man at the wheel laughed with pleased surprise and leaned over the door. Silver glanced up at him.
