

THE FRONTIER

TWO YOUTHS GET A YEAR EACH FOR ROBBERY A STORE

Two Transient Youths Plead Guilty To Breaking And Entering A Stuart General Store.

Last Saturday afternoon in district court Judge Dickson, on pleas of guilty to breaking and entering the general store of Al Willering, at Stuart, and removing therefrom some boots, cigarettes, 12 pairs of socks and other small articles to the value of $10.25, sentenced to the reformatory for men at Lincoln two young transients, one year each.

The boys gave their names, ages and addresses as Fred Froelich, 18, of Muskegon, Michigan, and Edward Letwis Royal, 18, of Thomasville, North Carolina.

The break-in occurred on the night of October 11 and next morning, Saturday, Chief of Police O. L. Leach of Stuart and Peter W. Duffy, sheriff of O'Neill, located the youngsters in a pasture hide-out about one and one half miles west of Stuart. They professed innocence but Willering identified the merchandise and Duffy brought the two here and placed them in the Holt county jail where both decided to plead guilty and take their medicine. The boys had no car and seemed to be trusting to luck to escape being caught. Both refused to give names of their parents.

Sheriff Duffy took his prisoners down to Lincoln the first of the week.

O'Neill Headquarters For Shelterbelt Workers

A. E. Hutchinson has been transferred to O'Neill and will be stationed there to look after the work of the shelterbelt in Holt county. Approximately 50 miles of shelterbelt will be planted in Holt county next spring, but the ground must be prepared and agreements signed this fall.

The strip is to be 10 rods wide, located on the half or quarter mile lines running at right angles to the prevailing winds and will vary from one-half mile to a mile in length. The trees will be planted in rows 10 feet apart and the recommended distance within the row for each particular species planted. The trees will consist of such trees as Russian Olive, Evergreen, Chinese and American Elm, Burr Oak or Pine Oak, Hackberry and Cottonwoods.

The agreement with the farmer is that the land is to be furnished to the government without charge this year. If the farmer is a AAA signer he may use this acreage as adjusted acreage for his contract if he wishes and receive benefit payments according to the contract. If not a AAA signer the land is to be donated until the government has funds to pay for leasing. The land is to be rented with the option of purchase within five years, and the rental fee which will probably start not later than Jan. 1, 1936, will be based on an annual payment of 9 per cent of the purchase price each year.

THE NEBRASKA SCENE

by James R. Lowell
The state penitentiary is due for a "blow-up" sometime within the next nine months, say a number of ex-guards who quit the employ of the prison early this fall. Prison authorities may be able to quell the uprising in its inception so that the outside world will never hear of it, or it may reach newspaper headlines the country over.

Fifteen guards, some of them old timers, have turned in their equipment since Otto Dudschus resigned as deputy warden late last summer. Several of them were dismissed by Warden Nate Harmon after a number of cell bars were found partially sawed thru. The guards were accused of negligence rather than complicity.

But the majority of the guards quitting the prison service have done so because of the "tense atmosphere" was "getting on our nerves."

Dudschus never made public a reason for resigning from the penitentiary staff. He says confidentially, however, that the job was getting his goat. He is selling life insurance now, but he is thinking about entering some phase of the aviation industry. "The law enforcement business is a good thing to stay out of," he declares. "I spent 15 years at it and I had less when I quit than when I started."

The Lowell Service reporter gathered from interviews with a number of the ex-prison guards that the alleged latent volcanic condition at the penitentiary is not the fault of Warden Harmon or anyone in particular.

A prison is naturally a dynamite mine, and prison authorities have to proceed cautiously in anything they do. The mass psychology of prisoners also may be likened to the animals in a lion and tiger taming act. The trainer must always do things the same and maintain an even temperament or a fracas is likely to ensue.

Warden W. T. Fenton, who took over the state penitentiary 23 years ago when the wardenship was taken from the "political plum" orchard and put under the direction of the board of control, was the most successful warden in the institution's history. He was not hard-boiled but he maintained strict discipline and moved along without any "sudden jerks" to set the "animals" off. But a year or so ago when he left the post, he was broken in health and his nerves were in such a condition that he would grab for his gun when someone walked suddenly into the room.

Dan Kavanaugh who succeeded Fenton also was more or less a victim to "prison nerves" and he died a few months after his appointment.

Now comes Warden Harmon, who was at one time chaplain of the institution. The old-time guard, who naturally doesn't want his name used, says that Harmon is a fine man and a capable executive, but not the type for a prison head.

"Mr. Harmon has too nervous a temperament for the job," said the old timer, "and it doesn't take an experienced hand long to sense the tension around the place. You've got to have a steady hand to handle the boys."

The list of tasks for the special legislative session this month has reached such length that if all of them were to be attended to the legislators would be in session for several months. Present indications are that Governor Cochran will limit his call to only two or three subjects aside from relief.

The governor is contemplating re-enactment of a revised Cone bill, known as the delinquent tax bill, which was found unconstitutional by the supreme court. Considerable pressure is being brought to bear on the chief executive for a substitute law which would allow the delinquent taxpayer to pay up his back taxes without penalty.

A law to enable Nebraska to take advantage of federal unemployment compensation benefits is on the governor's "must" list. "It is necessary to enact an unemployment compensation law so the state will be able to receive allowances credited from payroll taxes beginning the first of next year," he declares.

The state would lose benefits of an estimated $2,000,000 collected from Nebraskans in 1936, if such a law were not passed, he points out.

After conferring with relief authorities in Washington, Attorney General Wright is confident an effective and satisfactory social security law, aiding the aged especially, can be drawn up and passed at the special session.

The talk is now that the relief act will contain a provision whereby counties may administer their own pro rata shares of state funds. It was a suit brought by 23 counties not participating in federal relief, who objected to paying a one cent tax on gasoline to be used for relief in other counties of the state and not in their own, that caused the overthrow of the 1935 regular session relief acts.

History of the most vital sort is in the making in Nebraska in relation to the governmental regulation of the trucking industry which has grown from an infant to a veritable giant in the past decade. The truckers want a regulatory bill introduced in the special legislative session.

In keeping with the federal act passed by the last congress, the state railway commission has drawn up a bill after conferring with truckers from over the state. The bill would provide regulation for common and contract truck carriers with reference to insurance, labor, safety, permits and rates.

The rate problem is causing the most contention. The truckers maintain that their rates should be based on the cost of operation, plus a reasonable profit. The railroads, of course, want trucking rates parallel to their own.

Incidentally, interstate trucks are being assessed for the first time in Nebraska's history, according to State Tax Commissioner Smith. About 100 trucks running between points in Nebraska and other states come under the new truck assessment. Truck lines operating wholly within the state are assessed locally and the new assessment does not apply to them.

The unicameral legislature continues to be the political Lorelei luring the most politically ambitious Nebraskans into deep water, altho the gubernatorial race is running a close second as an attraction.

Recent filings (past two weeks) for the unicameral post include the names of O. O. Johnson, Gordon; Peter H. Claussen, Leigh; State Senator A. L. Neuman, Tekamah, and State Representative L. C. (Continued on page 4, column 1.)
