

NOTICE OF INTENTION TO ISSUE REFUNDING BONDS OF THE CITY OF O'NEILL, NEBRASKA.

Notice is hereby given that a regular meeting was held by the City Council of the City of O'Neill, Nebraska, on the 7th day of January, 1936. That said meeting was adjourned to January 8, 1936, 2 o'clock P. M. That on the 8th day of January, 1936, 2 o'clock P. M., at a regular meeting of the Mayor and City Council of O'Neill, Nebraska, held on that day, a Resolution was duly passed wherein it was directed that a public notice be given of the intention of the City of O'Neill, Nebraska, to issue Refunding Bonds of the City of O'Neill, Nebraska, which bonds are to be designated and known as "City of O'Neill Refunding Bonds, Series C," in the sum of $13,000.00.

lis and West Point on Jan. 4. Forty-three per cent of them took the Army examination and 55 per cent took the Navy examination. This was not an examination for admission to either academy but a competitive preliminary for making nominations to fill existing vacancies accredited to this district. The Commission will likely report the results of this examination about the middle of February and following that time nominations will be made. The nominations will go to the men earning the highest ratings in the competition. The single existing vacancy in the military academy accredited to this office enables us to nominate one principle candidate and two alternates and the single vacancy existing in the naval academy enables us to nominate one principal candidate and three alternates.

Just how much money is there in bullion in the vaults. That is a question. Some say we have about ten billion in gold and about one billion in silver. There is some which has been accounted for and an effort is being made to get a resolution to ask the treasurer to make a report to members of congress as to just what has been done with the money. These efforts indicate a strong endeavor will be made to get some of this idle money loose for the payment of outstanding government obligations.

Members are continuing to discuss with great earnestness the future farm program. Some of them figure that Uncle Sam will owe the farmers $200,000,000, and that obligations must be paid. Some believe this must come from the treasury direct, which means that the budget must eventually be revised. No one seems to know what the new farm program will be. All members seem to be waiting the outcome of conferences being held between President, agricultural department and committees and officers of farm organizations which are starting to gather in Washington.

Dave Lynn, the architect of the capitol, told members of the building and grounds committee today that in his annual report he had made some mention of "extension of the capitol building." He realizes that there is very little chance of inducing members of this congress to change the nation's capitol. It cost $28,000 to paint the capitol this year. The regular painters get $11 a day. Bricklayers get $12. Carpenters get $1.30 an hour.

Some members of the educational committee were discussing today the official report made by the Youth Commission of the American Council on Education, which is to the effect that approximately 5,500,000 young men between 16 and 25 years of age are out of jobs, unemployed, and out of school. 2,875,000 youths have recently been on relief.

Canadian farmers and cattlemen are taking advantage of the new reciprocal treaty by shipping trainloads of fatted cattle into America. Under this new treaty, the duty on cows weighing seven hundred pounds or more is reduced from three to two cents a pound, and some of the congressmen representing cattle districts don't seem to like this. There are all kinds of farm organizations in this town today. Some represent wheat, sugar beets, cotton, corn, hogs, peanuts, and in fact everything that is grown on land. They are making the rounds of the various congressional offices and telling members of congress the troubles their particular farmers are up against. Most of these farm representatives agree that the tariff was made for collecting revenue and later protection of farm produce against incoming foreign grown products. The majority of these farm representatives agree that products of American industry are given considerable protection, and that the time has come when the products of the American farmer should be given as much protection as the American manufacturers who, after all, must depend on the farmer for their eventual success. Before this session is over, there will be at least two or three independent committees working toward curbing some of these foreign farm commodities.

Joe Tisthammer, son of Arney Tisthammer, farmer living near Madison, called at the office today. Joe came here last November and is working in the government printing office. Joe remarks that he went into a butcher shop the other day where they charged fifty cents a pound for pork and wonders what the folks at home would think if they had to pay that. He figures about the best place in the world is down on the Tisthammer farm near Madison. Joe is only 19 years old and these boys who work in Washington and do not meet folks from home very often get a little lonesome for mother's good cooking and the good old farm atmosphere.

CONGRESS AS SEEN BY A NEBRASKAN.

By Karl Stefan
Members of Congress who come from farm states are viewing with alarm the avalanche of foreign butter coming to our ports. The first shipment to arrive was 4,500 boxes from Argentina. In February there will be 4,500 cases from Northern European countries and 46,007 boxes from New Zealand. Because of this, and a new Canadian reciprocity treaty which went into effect January 1st, Congressmen have started to hold hearings to fight against the importation of these foreign-produced farm products. They feel that it doesn't make common sense to open gates of the United States to foreign produce when this country is planning a restricted domestic farm program. Because of these fears, these Congressmen today introduced in the House of Representatives a resolution urging the stoppage of these imports, especially on dairy products. The Wisconsin Progressives took a lead in this work and were quickly joined by Congressmen from other states. A big rally of these Congressmen is to be held next Monday morning to push this resolution thru the House. Some members stated that they have information to the effect that New Zealand butter is not only becoming a menace to the producers of the United States but also to England and Canada. The New Zealanders can ship their butter 9,000 miles to London and deliver it for thirteen or fourteen cents cheaper than the average cost. If foreign-produced butter to compete with the farmers who milk cows in their own land, should we let it come to the United States to compete with the butter of American farmers?
