Wallace Bares New Deal Plans

Complete Co-operatives Seen as Death Blow to American Ideal.

By WILLIAM J. LEE

CHICAGO, ILL.—Establishment of cooperatives for producers and consumers, wiping out the American system of free competition and business on a profit basis and threatening the ruin of independent farmers and tradesmen and retail storekeepers, is now seen as one of the next objectives of the New Deal. New Dealers at the Philadelphia convention presented a plank in favor of co-operatives that had the support of President Roosevelt, but this was rejected by some of the older and conservative members of the resolutions committee "as being too radical," so only a modest reference was made to the scheme in the platform.

However, publication of a book entitled, "Whose Constitution?" by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace revealed the scope of the New Deal co-operative ideas.

Study Co-operatives in Europe. In his book Mr. Wallace declares that "it is inevitable that more and more emphasis is going to be laid on the idea of co-operation as distinguished from free competition" and sets forth that the only way a democracy can survive "is to develop the genuine co-operative ideal to the limit."

"Producers' co-operatives are not enough," he asserts. "The co-operative way of life must pervade the community, and this means there must be consumers' co-operatives as well as producers' co-operatives."

The day after the Wallace book appeared, President Roosevelt announced he had sent a New Deal commission to Europe to study the operation of co-operatives.

Commenting upon the Democratic co-operative plank, the Wallace book and the President's co-operative commission, and the fact that there are marked similarities between Mr. Roosevelt's acceptance speech and the Wallace volume, the Kansas Times states: "(It is probable) . . . that the inner ring of New Dealers already have agreed among themselves as to the next trick they will pull from the bag, either at an opportune time in the campaign or after the election, should it go their way."

"The co-operative commonwealth idea . . . has recalled the declaration of Prof. Rexford G. Tugwell some time back that, under the new order he envisaged for America, business as it now is known logically would tend to disappear."

Platform Reticence Explained.

How the Wallace idea of co-operatives is viewed in Democratic circles may be seen in the following statements by Frank R. Kent, Democrat, in one of his recent columns: "Apparently he (Mr. Wallace) believes that under the general welfare clause a liberal-minded Supreme court could permit transformation of the country into a gigantic co-operative commonwealth, under which the objectives of the NRA, AAA and other invalidated New Deal measures could constitutionally be achieved. There seems no other way to interpret his language."

"It is quite the most far-reaching idea yet advanced and it is easy to understand why the New Deal politicians did not want it injected into the campaign."

From this it seems clear the New Deal now proposes to set up a system of regimentation that would ruin every independent farmer and every independent retail merchant. There are millions of independent farmers and more than 475,000 retailers in the United States.

Such a regimentation might deny a farmer's son an opportunity to earn a living for himself on his own farm and prevent a man establishing himself in a business of his own making. All might become cogs in a huge federal machine.

Purses Hit by U. S. Orgy of Spending, Say Women

Chicago.—"Women, who are vitally interested in the pocketbook, are beginning to realize how deeply home budgets have to be cut under the present orgy of government spending," said Mrs. Walter Scudger Hart of Chicago, president of the Illinois League of Republican Women, following a speaking tour of Indiana.

Mrs. Hart brought assurance that the women of Indiana are leading the state to the Landon and Knox column. "Reckless government spending, mounting taxes and the certainty of no returns from scores of the administration's projects are making women all over Indiana see the folly of the New Deal," said Mrs. Hart.

From Estonia, 24,896 lbs. cooked hams; 2,950 lbs. salt pork. From Hungary, 44,845 lbs. cooked hams. From Irish Free State, 2,746 lbs. salami. From Lithuania, 67,620 lbs. fresh frozen hams. From Poland, 22,688 lbs. smoked bacon; 241,867 lbs. cooked ham; 11,952 lbs. luncheon meat. From Uruguay, 303,760 lbs. canned corn beef. American farmers have been asked under the New Deal to restrict production of their farms, yet farm products are being brot into this country at a rate far in excess of any other period in history. No wonder the American producer is becoming "fed up" with the program and is asking a change.
