are trying their best to blame business for what is happening and has happened in Washington.

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

At the time this is written the election is just five weeks in the future. The issues—such as they are—are drawn. The rattle of political machine-gun fire grows constantly louder.

The average citizen has neither the time nor the inclination to keep up with a presidential campaign in its hectic closing period. To do that, he would have to read a dozen speeches each week; peruse a score of columns authorized by observers ranging all the way from GOP stalwart Mark Sullivan to New Dealer Jay Franklin, and keep up with hundreds of thousands of words of news-matter sent out by the big press associations.

In the week ending September 27, a number of highly dramatic and potentially important incidents occurred. Both the President and Governor Landon took to the radio to expound their views on various issues. And, on a lower political level, scores of party followers carried on for their chiefs.

Most dramatic event was William Randolph's attack on the President, in which he said that Mr. Roosevelt had the support of "enemies of the American system of government"—that is the Communists. This was promptly denied by Earl Browder, official Communist presidential nominee.

Of more practical importance in the vital matter of vote getting was the attention paid to the long-debated subject of farm crop insurance by both contenders. Mr. Roosevelt announced in a press conference that he had appointed a committee to formulate plans, said that "crop insurance and a system of storage reserves should operate so that surpluses of fat years could be carried over for use in lean years." A day or two later Governor Landon made public part of a yet unspoken speech, in which he too endorsed crop insurance. Inasmuch as crop insurance is mentioned in neither party platform, unprejudiced commentators thing that both candidates were out to get the jump on the other with something new and compelling—that a stalemate resulted.

Unusually aggressive was Governor Landon's speech on social security, in which he assailed administration methods, though he approves of such a plan in principle. He said the New Deal was a "cruel hoax," that it endangered "the whole cause of social security," and pledged his party to the enactment of a "pay-as-you-go" old age pension system which would "provide for every American citizen over 65 the supplementary payment necessary to give a minimum income sufficient to protect him or her from want."

On the radio, the President continued his policy of making well-phrased, calm speeches, in which he criticizes his opponents only by inference. His big drive is yet to come—he apparently feels it is more or less a waste of motion to make major speeches as early as this.

In the meantime, the endless speculation as to who will win continues. The Literary Digest poll, on the basis of early returns, gives Landon a big lead—most other polls give Roosevelt a small but seemingly safe margin. State primaries so far have shown little. Anti-New Deal democrats have been badly beaten for the most part, as have the Townsendedites. The Maine election is said by republicans to make a GOP victory certain, while democrats pooh-pooh it. As a matter of fact, in the past when democrats have carried elections in Maine a democratic president has always been elected. When republicans have won by tremendous majorities, a republican president has always been elected. But when the election was relatively close, as it was this year, the following national election has always been close as well. In that, the Maine results echo the views of most political experts—the next President will win his office by a very slim margin.

The following paragraph is taken from a speech delivered by former Governor Lowden of Illinois, at Waterloo, Iowa, last Tuesday evening: "If all incomes of over $5,000 a year and all net profits of all the corporations in the United States for the last year in which figures were available were taken by the government, they would fall more than a billion dollars short of meeting government expenditures for a single year. Then the truth began to dawn that the great body of the people must in the end pay the major part of all taxes."

IS THIS AMERICA?

Two WPA workers, wearing Landon campaign buttons applied for work at the Terminal Warehouse in Lincoln. They were met with this statement: "You have a lot of guts to come here looking for work wearing a Landon pin. There will be no need of your applying for work here as the Roosevelt administration isn't supporting the republican party."

The high taxes induced by wasteful spending, the unfixed state of the governmental budget, the inefficiency and incompetence of those who are in charge of governmental agencies, the unending abuse of business men by important officials in government—all those things added together make uncertainty, stagnation, discouragement, depression and more men and women out of jobs. It is impossible to encourage business to "go ahead" as long as business is kicked in the seat of its collective pants by government officials who
