SOUTHWEST BREEZES
By Romaine Saunders

R. W. McGinnis was greeting friends in Amelia last Sunday.

Friends of the family will be glad to learn that Mrs. Harry White is much improved in health.

Those accustomed to satisfy thirst from God's great reservoirs in the southwest have no taste for Missouri river water and hop juice.

Rev. Mr. Morton, of the Free Methodist church was called to Cattsville by the illness of Mrs. Morton who had gone there on a visit.

The delinquent tax list is getting bigger and better. The millions of increased farm income we read about apparently is not being used to pay taxes.

The institutions stewing the foaming amber beverage now promise some real fire water. Passing out of the perspiring season, the cooling swig takes on a warming effect.

If you like to talk about the neighbors maybe Amy Semple-McPherson's plan will help you along: "You may talk about me all you please, I'll talk about you—down on my knees."

The barn at the old Charley Thompson ranch, a huge affair that had stood like the Leaning Tower for a number of years from the onslaught of a fierce gale, is being torn down and rebuilt.

Levi Clemens was over this way Friday looking over the road and bridge of the mile south of the Berry school house, this being one of Wyoming precinct's miles for road maintenance on the precinct line.

Fred Watson went to Sioux City Wednesday of last week with a load of cattle while the boys at the ranch put the season's accumulation of calves thru the ordeal of the redhot branding iron and the vaccine injection.

None on relief need fear the return of the wolf to the door if a change of administration is voted. As I understand it, Mr. Landon would not abandon the needy to the gaunt specter of want but will remedy the abuses and waste now becoming a national scandal.

Many out this way find they have some corn to husk and are getting into the fields to secure what there is ahead of the crows now working in packs to consume the little raised. The quality of the corn is good but ears are small, many not well filled, Glen White is the most optimistic of those talked with. His crop is yielding 15 bushels to the acre.

In the basement of the Methodist church at Chambers on Tuesday of next week, old timers of south Holt are to be entertained at dinner. Sixty-five and over is the age requirement. It is an annual affair and has always proved a high light of social functions for those of mellow years. Amelia folks have been asked to help and participate.

Democrats out this way are not taking kindly to the work of certain party leaders in bringing out a petition candidate to oppose the regular party nominee. They suspicion it is done with the thought that their petition candidate may not survive another full term and a vacancy will be created to fill by appointment. Hence they are supporting Carpenter.

Nothing has appeared lately concerning social functions they went to indulge in northern Holt. I have not been a guest only as Ed Early with a master hand takes us thru the festivities in vivid word picture. There is a community of neighborly people out that way but perhaps their social season has not yet begun. Neighborliness out this way is not often in groups, it being manifest in fellowship family with family.

A beauty spot amid the brown, dry sod of October is a gorgeous green front yard at the Ed Jungman ranch. Primarily occupied in keeping up a herd of White Faces, Mr. Jungman finds time for a little landscape work about his nicely appointed home. Splendid results have been achieved in having a fresh green lawn during the autumn by seeding with bluegrass and oats and letting the windmill furnish the needed moisture. Zenias yet untouched by frost add to the picture with their bright shades.

I have just received another specimen of "planned economy." This time it is a story from a New York Sun Washington correspondent telling about the importance of Mr. Tugwell in President Roosevelt's councils. It is sent direct from Washington under the frank of an eastern senator and appears to have been printed in the Congressional Record. Its political value is a doubtful quantity but that does not mitigate the cost to our government, now in charge of a group loudly shouting "who cares for expenses!"

The individual irrevocably and irredeemably padlocked to anything and everything his party leaders promulgate becomes "raving, caving, stark staring mad" by just mentioning the federal money spending spree. He comes at you with that somewhat "flat, stale and unprofitable" clatter about the spike-tailed, cloven-hoofed and evil eyed Herbert Hoover having spread industrial paralysis from the Arctic Circle to Little America and belted the equator with the frosts of commercial ruin. There seems to be nothing hurts a New Dealer quite so much as the facts about the spendthrifts at Washington.

Probably he has entertained the suspicion that the work on the farm of such as myself was merely negligible but Bob Gallagher had the tangible evidence to the contrary Friday last when he was out from O'Neill on a visit to the southwest. I was high atop a load of hay and did not get to interview him as to the purpose of the visit, but if it was to show a ranch property to prospective buyers the country never looked worse and never offered a better opportunity to investors. There has been no rain of any consequence since last June. Rains will come again and the country will bloom in its accustomed beauty. Now is the time to buy.

Having had some opportunity thru the years to observe the official conduct of the judiciary in this and other judicial districts, I can see no reason for a change in judges at this time. Judge Dickson has made just about as good a record on the bench as you will find in this or adjoining states. His experience and knowledge of the law is supplemented by good horse sense and a familiarity with the ups and downs of life of just about all of us in the district. Cold legalism is often in need of an infusion of kindly wisdom and we believe litigants and others of the district are getting that now at no sacrifice of that which is just and right.

L. G. Gillespie of O'Neill called on a few in Swan and Wyoming one day last week. Mr. Gillespie says he has just started an active campaign in this county to secure a seat in the one-house legislature. His interest in road development appeals in strong terms to this community. In the new setup to which Nebraska must look for legislation the counties of Holt, Boyd, Keya Paha and Rock comprise a district with one member of the legislature to represent it for a period of two years. The district as a whole is agriculture and livestock, much of the ranch territory being badly in need of adequate highways. Mr. Gillespie says if he is successful in securing a seat in the legislature he will do all he can for a farm-to-market road program for his district.
