

Uncle Phil Says:

The Mark Stays
Gossip is like mud thrown against a clean wall; it may not stick but it leaves a mark.
Be natural, borrowed garments seldom fit well.

There are people who think they are observant, who can't tell you offhand what are the pictures on a one-dollar bill or a five-dollar bill.
Smile, smile, smile if you like, but don't pound people over the head in your enthusiasm to make them do it.

Ability to Profit
There is sometimes much ability in knowing how to profit by good advice.

The life you lead writes its story on your face, but only the clever can read it.

Things that "cannot be done" are done within the following twenty years.

A girl's no-hope chest is one that begins to accumulate interest-bearing bonds.

The Wilful Transgressor
It is not the compelled, but the wilful transgression of law which corrupts the character.

There is nothing like the candor of boys toward each other's faults.
Noah never wrote a book on natural history when he had the best of opportunities.

If his wife is the best dressed woman at the party, a man thinks it's worth it.

Destroying Accomplishments
Can't you see a splendid tree without thinking of the thrill of cutting it down? Apparently some can't and the anticipation overcomes them.

Silence is the wisest argument of the ignorant man and the wise man can frequently use it to advantage.

A boy changes his voice at the age of fifteen or sixteen, and he changes all his notions, too.

Genuine Bayer Aspirin tablets give quick relief, for one reason, because they dissolve or disintegrate almost instantly they touch moisture. (Note illustration above.)

Hence—when you take a real Bayer Aspirin tablet it starts to dissolve almost as quickly as you swallow it. And this is ready to start working almost instantly... headaches, neuralgia and neuritis pains start easing almost at once.

That's why millions never ask for aspirin by the name aspirin alone when they buy, but always say "BAYER ASPIRIN" and see that they get it.

FLOYD GIBBONS

ADVENTURERS CLUB

"Terror at the Door"

By FLOYD GIBBONS.

THIS is the story of a man, a woman and a dog—and I'll admit right at the start that the dog got the dirty end of the deal.

The woman was Ellen J. Swanson of Springfield, N. J. The dog's name was Bill. The name of the man, I can't give you. I don't know it, and Ellen Swanson doesn't even want to know it. Maybe he wouldn't want us to know it either. There you have the characters in our story. Twenty-four years ago, on a cold, January night, Fate juggled up a meeting between them—and most anything Fate arranges is packed full of drama.

The scene of that meeting was the home of Ellen and her husband on the outskirts of Summit, N. J. It was almost one o'clock in the morning, but Ellen was still up. Her husband was working late that night, and he'd want a hot meal when he came home. It was on the stove cooking now—and Ellen was sitting in the kitchen beside the red-hot stove, reading and fighting off drowsiness.

Enter the Brutal Looking Tramp.
Come a knock at the door. That ought to be her husband. Ellen jumped out of her chair, opened the door, exclaiming, "You poor dear!" But the last word stuck in her throat. Her feet seemed to freeze to the floor. It was not her husband.

It wasn't her husband, but the ugliest, dirtiest, most brutal looking tramp Ellen had ever seen. He had a long hunting knife in his hand, and under his arm was a bloody newspaper from which the head of a dead rabbit protruded. From a piece of clothesline tied around his waist hung a dead chicken.

Ellen stood gazing, speechless, at this strange figure. The tramp was the first one to speak. "I saw your light," he said, "and I ain't got no matches. I want to cook this here chicken." He paused, and Ellen noted to her horror that the tramp had planted his foot inside the door so that she couldn't close it. "But maybe you give me something to eat," he went on. "I been walkin' a long ways."

He Made Himself at Home.
Ellen had to fight to find her voice. "Ye-es," she stammered. "Wait there. I'll bring something out to you." But the tramp pushed his foot farther into the kitchen. "It's too dark out here to see to eat," he stated flatly. And with that he stepped inside, pushed her out of the way, and closed the door behind him.

"I walked over to the table," says Ellen, "but I did not feel the floor under my feet. The tramp pulled out a chair and sat down. Somehow I got a plate and poured him some soup. Crackers and bread were already on the table, and he began to eat.

"In the meantime I was praying to God to save me and my two small children. I was so frightened that my teeth were chattering, and perspiration formed in beads all over my face. I wanted to scream, but I knew it would be useless. The road we lived on didn't have many houses. There was one off to the right of us, but on the other side there was nothing but dense woods.

"Then, like a flash, a thought came to me—and with it came a little courage. I stepped across the room, saying, 'I must get the dog before you go out again. He is a fierce, vicious watch dog, and it's funny that he missed you coming in.'"

One Thing Made Bill Angry.
Ellen did have a dog—a big one. But he was no more vicious than Shirley Temple. He was just a big, good-natured hulk of a mutt that made friends with anybody and everybody. But Ellen had a plan. She called, "Bill—here Bill." And Bill came running like a streak. Inside the kitchen he spied the tramp and was all set to wag his tail. But Ellen grabbed his collar, held on to him with all her might, and put her scheme into action.

There was just one thing that ever made Bill get mad. When Ellen's youngest child was a baby, Bill used to like to walk beside her carriage. He walked so close that the wheels would run over his big clumsy feet. On such occasions he would growl and snap, and the hair on his back would bristle up like a porcupine's quills.

That was what Ellen had remembered. Now she thrust out her foot and came down hard on poor Bill's toes.

Bill growled and tried to pull away. Ellen held him faced toward the tramp and tugged backward on his collar. The tramp looked up from his plate of soup, and Ellen stepped on Bill's foot again.

Fierce Enough to Scare Any Tramp.
She stepped a little harder that second time, and Bill almost went crazy with pain. The hair on his back stood up in true porcupine fashion. Bill looked like the toughest, most dangerous dog in the world at that moment.

The tramp jumped out of his chair. Ellen could see that he was beginning to be afraid. Then she put on the finishing touches to her little act. In a breathless voice she said to the tramp: "I think you'd better go now. I can't hold him much longer, and I'm afraid his collar will break."

And with that, Ellen stepped once more on Bill's toes.
Bill let out another deep-throated growl—tugged furiously at his collar again. The tramp began gathering up his bundles. He got them together and slunk out of the door—reluctant to leave his half-finished dinner behind him, but not any too anxious to stay in the same room with that snarling, vicious dog.

When he was gone, Ellen was shaking like a leaf. She bolted the door, and then fell to patting Bill. He wasn't much of a dog as far as protection was concerned—but he sure could put up a swell bluff if you stepped on his toes a little.

Meaning of Jujitsu
Jujitsu means literally the art of making one's opponent use his strength to his own disadvantage. It is not a system of muscle building by physical training, but rather a means of offsetting the effectiveness of powerful muscles by performing the most simple but skillful maneuvers. It is a scientific application of the knowledge of the weaker spots in the human anatomy to offensive and defensive. Every trick that would be accounted "foul" in wrestling and boxing is the height of excellence in jujitsu. This science is taught to every officer and enlisted man of the Japanese army, navy and police force.

Congressmen
In popular usage the term congressman is applied to a member of the house of representatives; but officially, he is designated a representative, and a member of the senate, a senator. Strictly speaking, however, a member of either the house or the senate might be called a congressman, because congress consists of two branches—the senate and the house of representatives. While this is technically correct, it is misleading, because the average person uses congressman when speaking of a representative, and this usage has become so well established that a senator is never called a congressman.

BRISBANE THIS WEEK

End of the Treaty
Millions for New Farms
Too Many Apologies
The Mirror Monocle

Chancellor Hitler has demolished the remaining fragments of the Versailles treaty, nullifying the great powers that they may no longer control, as they have done since 1918, the principal rivers of Germany.

Arthur Brisbane France is content to ask other powers to join a protest. Mere protests amount to little in European diplomacy, as the world learned from the Ethiopian war.

That settles, finally, the Versailles treaty, a foolish effort to enslave a nation that made the emergence of this, or some other, Hitler inevitable.

Mr. Tugwell seeks an appropriation of five hundred million dollars to provide poverty-stricken farmers, now on worthless farms, with other land that will support them; also barns, houses, out-buildings. He thinks $50,000,000 a year for ten years would do the work, and plans to vacate 9,000,000 "worthless acres."

Anything that will diminish human misery is desirable, even though incompetency may be in part responsible for the trouble.

In England, the government, guided by experts, is making excellent pasture lands of soil that was worthless. Our government might investigate that process.

General Markham, chief army engineer, advises putting an air base in the harbor of our Midway island, far away in the Pacific ocean. The War Department says, apologetically, that this would be a commercial development, although it might be useful for defense.

Why an apology? Nobody in Europe, Asia or Africa apologizes to us for building an air base, or asks our opinion about it.

The War department says there is no treaty obligation forbidding such an air base. If there were, what of it? Treaties can be cancelled, and should be when they are foolish or unjust—for further details, ask Hitler.

Germans are said to be wearing a new eyeglass called a "spy monocle." Arranged to look like the ordinary single eyeglass, the "spy monocle" is arranged with a mirror, permitting the wearer to look behind him and see if there is anybody listening to his conversation. German police eagerly discourage any one who suggests that the Nazi government is not perfect.

The opening of the Bay bridge, connecting San Francisco and Oakland, California, is important not only to California and the two united cities, but to the whole country.

This magnificent bridge, eliminating ferries on the bay that separates San Francisco and Oakland, is a magnificent accomplishment of engineering and public spirit.

Mr. Green's American Federation of Labor decides on a "fight to a showdown" with Mr. Lewis' "Committee for Industrial Organization," which wants to unionize all the 30,000,000 workers not yet organized, and seems to include taking over Mr. Green and his federation also.

Next on the program appears to be a big labor fight: Mr. Green is thoughtful, wise; Mr. Lewis is forceful, determined. The outcome cannot be predicted. The outside citizen will pray that there may not be too much interference with returning prosperity.

A greatly increased demand for tools shows that more men are getting jobs, and announcements of new wage increases, big and little, are many. Twenty-three more firms have announced better wages for 28,000 more workers.

An average increase of $130 a year, less than 50 cents a day, might seem unimportant, but it means one hundred and thirty million more dollars that 1,000,000 workers will have to spend, in a year. That is not unimportant.

England intends next time to devote her energy and strength to protecting herself.

Sir Samuel Hoare, first lord of the admiralty, says England has no "commitments" like those of 1914, that would compel her to send troops to the continent if war should start. She will do as she pleases, which means that she will probably stay at home, busy with enemy airplanes, perhaps helping to finance friends on the continent, as she did in the Napoleonic wars, as she did before and since.

The Chic New Princess Silhouettes

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

SO FAR as the silhouette of the autumn and winter frock, coat or ensemble, is concerned, anything in the way of startling innovations is apt to happen these days, in fact is happening. The whole scheme of things is changing. For one thing it is back to short wide-at-hemline skirts that current fashion has dared to go—fourteen inches from the floor if you care to follow the extreme.

The present wide swing hemlines are indeed a radical departure from the sleek sheath skirts of past-season vogue. Take note of the word "swing," if you please, for it is a word that is a big word in connection with the newer fashions. Your costume to be chic must have "it" (meaning swing) and it is the new wide-at-hemline skirts that are giving exactly the style-right swing in demand.

To recount further the changing moods of the mode, comes now into the style picture high-waist, square-neck, puff-sleeve directoire trends, also quaint Victorian fashions, also Spanish themes, likewise picturesque Tyrolean costumes and that which is perhaps making the greatest impression of all—the very charming new princess "lines."

The princess influence is as everywhere present in daytime clothes as it is in formal evening clothes. From the formal evening angle the message is of regal black velvet gowns cut exquisitely à la princess, the long unbelted lines of classic simplicity sweeping out into expansive hemlines. The very beautiful moire silks so favored for dinner and dance gowns yield gloriously to princess styling, as do also the fashionable metal cloths and brocades.

With all due recognition of the importance of the princess silhouette in the evening mode, it is in the daytime fashions that the most

Contrast in color continues to characterize the fall hats. Dashes of bright color on black hats are frequent. Other color contrasts gaining favor in millinery are: Cocoa felt with ivy green faille; dark Araby brown felt with royal blue faille contrast; dark deep green in felt with ribbon in soft rusty wine.

Some of the shades appearing in velvet hats in Paris are plum, purple blue, empire green, Chinese blue, harvest grape and cocoa.

Tailored Suit With Fur Is Ideal for Autumn Days

If you don't have to worry about a budget and car go ahead and buy an outfit for now and a warmer one for later, a tailored or dressmaker suit with fur is ideal. It may include slim skirt and jacket with fur collar and cuffs or a plain jacket and skirt with fur-trimmed topcoat, swaggar or fitted.

The most popular version of the formalized variety come in black broadcloth with Persian lamb or silver fox; brown broadcloth with mink or brown Persian. The sports types are finished with wolf, lynx or raccoon collars and are made from the new rough, nubby woolsens.

Silver Threads
The current coin of fashion is silver gleaming on crepe or satiny backgrounds. A blouse with the glitter of silver—needn't be expensive at all—will turn your suit into a five o'clock costume.

Skirts and Sleeves
While there are exceptions to this rule, in most cases plain sleeves are used on dresses when the skirt is flaring, and full sleeves on dresses having narrow skirts.

How Many Pennies Your Child's Life?

Don't Try to "Save" on Home Remedies—Ask Your Doctor

There is one point, on which practically all doctors agree. That is: Don't give your child unknown remedies without asking your doctor first.

All mothers know this. But sometimes the instinct to save a few pennies by buying "something just as good" overcomes caution.

When it comes to the widely used children's remedy—"milk of magnesia"—many doctors for over half a century have said "PHILLIPS." For Phillips' Milk of Magnesia is the standard of the world. Safe for children.

Keep this in mind, and say "PHILLIPS' MILK OF MAGNESIA" when you buy. Comes now, also in tablet form. Get the form you prefer. But see that what you get is labeled "Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia." 25¢ for a big box of the tablets at drug stores.
