SOUTHWEST BREEZES
By Romaine Saunders

E. E. Young went to his former home in Kansas last week on business.

And what is there about a farmer trying to husk more corn than all others to make a whole countryside go nuts?

Mrs. Fanny Riley, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Baker and Ned and Mildred Saunders spent Thanksgiving with friends in Albion.

William Arnold was over from Amelia a day last week with his saw rig and converted a lot of dry cottonwood into fuel for De Lance Withers.

What is there about a dingy, smoke-filled room and a pack of soiled cards to entice a man from his family and fireside for an all-night session?

When a vegetarian and one entertaining no such scruples sit down to a Thanksgiving dinner with a nine-pound turkey hen nicely browned the carnivorous one is pretty apt to go the limit.

D. L. Withers and H. L. James went down to the Chris Madsen sale in lower Wyoming precinct last Wednesday. We understand Mr. Madsen is another who has caught the new Oregon fever.

Votes being not needed, a reduction in PWA workers by fifty per cent is ordered as a starter. Officially we are informed there is increased demand in private industry but some ten million idle workmen say they don't know where to buy a job.

Little chance for justice if left in the hands of officers whose mistaken sense of official duty makes frenzied fools of otherwise calm and sane men. The spirit that dominates lynching mobs is none the less reprehensible in officers of the law.

A gentleman of letters down at the state university is credited with putting it this way: "The moisture content of both top soil and subsoil is seriously depleted." An old timer down here has been heard to express the same thought—"it's dryer than h—"

Anyone will respond to the call of a neighbor in need night or day. However, a neighboring rancher says he could take a club to his best friends that aroused him from the midnight slumbers to find they had filled the wrong tank before leaving town.

The United States treasury has a full page ad in colors in a magazine of national standing which asks a thousand dollars for such a space. The treasury is seeking a market for more government bonds and offers the liberal inducement of thirty-three and a third per cent increase at maturity.

Should it find itself impotent, shorn of spiritual force, standing naked and ashamed the church that has abandoned the old paths for a "new gospel," against which the great Apostale Paul once threw out a warning, it will learn that a soul service, not a social service, is the thing needed to bring healing to a world's heartache.

Mr. and Mrs. Borg and family, residing two miles east of Midway, were at Amelia Sunday in the interests of Sunday school work, Mr. Borg being president of the county Sunday School Association. He spoke to the Methodist group as did also Mrs. Borg. She sang a solo and the girls sang a few selections. They are visiting the schools of the county and interesting them in a convention to be held in Chambers some months hence.

Oregon has its beds of roses, California its orange blossoms, Arizona its painted desert and Nebraska its nocturnal charm. In late November down here in the southwest there is opportunity for unrestricted view of the moon's full orb walking in majestic and incomparable splendor across the gilded vault and the unnumbered stars twinkling in silent grandeur. The celestial picture on a cloudless night an hour after sunset transcends the gorgeous terrestrial scenes. The beauty of form, the fragrance, the exquisite coloring of the flowers holds a charm, but searching the mystery of the night sky has been coeval with the existence of man. Lonely watchers of armies in bivouac, shepherds watching their flocks as well as the great of the earth have beheld with rapture the gilded orbs of night, and a star pointed the place of the birth of the Saviour. We have all this scene without the turning of a furrow or the breaking of a clod. "The heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament showeth his handiwork."

Have we gone soft? Are we no good any more? Where is the breed of men and women who settled the sod-bound prairies of Holt county? We hear the moderns talk about being poor, about relief, of corn-hog checks, old age assistance and other expressions grouping us under charity's wing. Many of the pioneers were poor in a sense not now known. They fought the grim struggle and asked odds of no one. A bleak winter in the long ago a family that settled near what is now the town of Inman subsisted for days on dried cherries brought with them from Iowa. In after years, in a comfortable frame house and surrounded with plenty, on the land they had homesteaded, I frequently dined with them and their table was always abundantly supplied with the best. They enjoyed telling of those early privations and the satisfaction they felt of having made their own way to better things. Daily rations of boiled potatoes were common among the very early settlers. Game was plentiful but that took ammunition which in turn took money. But a dollar looked as big as a hind wheel of a wagon. The champion of the hard luck brigade of today has yet the rudiments to learn. A lady of quality fell in a faint at a church service one night in O'Neill. Another young fellow and myself secured a team and buggy and took her to her home. What we should have done but didn't know it was to have taken her to Lewie's food counter and given her a square meal. She was starving but too proud to ask help. Are there still such among us? To the boys and girls of the pioneers, themselves now tinted with gray by the hand of time, there comes through memory's dream the sufferings and sacrifices of their fathers and mothers and the present day complaints make them just a little bit tired.
