 Motion by Carson, seconded by Smith that the following claim be allowed in the amounts as stated:

Wonder at Length of Session
 There are all kinds of guesses as to how long this session of Congress will last. There used to be some hopes it would adjourn in May, but now the members are getting pretty dizzy from the various blasts that are coming from 1600 Pennsylvania avenue, which is the White House. In a little more than two weeks the White House has suggested that Congress order the re-organization of the government and make over the federal courts. A lot of the old-timers here are wondering what will come next. The local newspapers have all kinds of cartoons and their picture members as old men with gray beards and straw in their ears. People here make a lot of fun of Congressmen and Senators, but they make heroes of those members who are up in front fighting for bigger and better appropriation for the city of Washington.

Dr. M. N. Naquist of Chicago, is one of the directors of the American College of Surgeons, and is in town today. He has been visiting the President's physician, with Dr.

Frank Howard, Road, $25.00; General, $3.25.
 5:00 P. M. On motion, Board adjourned until January 28, 1937, 9:00 A. M.
 J. C. STEIN, Chairman.
 John C. Gallagher, Clerk.

Watch Court Proposals
 Many letters are being received in the congressional office regarding the president's proposal to make additions to the supreme-court. The membership of the House is watching the work on the two committees which have this legislation in charge. It is also listening to the speeches for and against the proposal. The lobby talk is to the effect that the proposal may pass the House after a debate but that the real test and final outcome depends upon the result of the fight which will be staged on the senate floor.

Lincoln Day in Washington
 The President and representatives of many patriotic organizations laid wreaths of flowers in front of the beautiful Lincoln Memorial which is on the Potomac river facing Washington's monument and the nation's capitol. In the house chamber, a Kentucky representative delivered a beautiful tribute to the memory of the great emancipator. The services were without flash and without noise. There was no color or parades. Simplicity marked all activity in connection with Lincoln ceremonies here. Lincoln was not a "society man." He was a commoner and after all these years that spirit of simplicity and modesty seems to have penetrated to this generation.

A Michigan lady, whose husband was in congress and who died in the service last year, stayed at the monument after nearly everybody had left. She is a great student of Lincoln. As she stood there a young lady came to her with palpitating breath and told her that her boss, who is one of the house leaders, let her go to attend the services. She is the official's housemaid. She was terribly disappointed she had missed seeing the President. While the two women talked together another lady came up and said she had just come to Washington from Missouri. Her husband is a printer in one of the many departments. She had never been to Washington before and wanted to see the President and take part in the Lincoln services. The Michigan lady took these two women into the monument and told them about the two Lincoln speeches which are carved in stone on the north and south walls. As she talked, tears came to the eyes of these two women. Those listening to the Michigan lady were amazed at the wealth of information she had about the great emancipator. Lincoln—if he were alive today would have loved this little scene. The housemaid and the printer's wife left the Michigan lady and walked off for their first trip to the top of Washington's monument. As they crossed the street they turned back and waved to the lady from Michigan. Lincoln would have loved that scene too. Three common, good women coming together like this to worship the memory of a common man.

There were several people who saw this little scene which was not on the program, as they went over to the wall of the memorial where is carved Lincoln's Gettysburg address. One man reading out loud said it this way: "Under God, government of the people, by the people and for the people, shall at least not perish from my country."

Within the next ninety days E. H. Luikart, head of the state bank receivership division, says that he will resign, as he expects to have the fifteen receiverships left under him all completed by that time. The Nebraska supreme court has not yet handed down a decision in the test case begun about a year ago to determine whether or not the governor has the power to take the receiverships away from Luikart. The National Installment Investment corporation, recently incorporated with a capital stock authorization of $100,000, of which $10,000 is paid up, with $2,500 for surplus and undivided profits, will begin a general investment and personal finance business in Lincoln about March 1, with Mr. Luikart as president. Other officers are D. C. Cole, secretary; George Easley, treasurer, and John F. Zimmer and W. R. Mowbray, members of the board of directors.

New dormitories may be built at some of the state teachers' colleges as a result of a bill which has been approved by the legislature. Sponsored by Allen Strong and Harry E. Gantz of Alliance, the bill makes provision that the state board of educational lands and funds may invest school funds up to $150,000 in dormitory revenue bonds for each state normal school. An amendment by H. L. Pizer of North Platte includes the school of agriculture at Curtis. Advocates of the bill claim revenue from dormitories has always been more than enough to meet the requirements of interest and retirement of principal.

THE NEBRASKA SCENE

By the Lowell Service
 Charley Bryan, mayor of Lincoln, remains coy and elusive. Those who know Charley intimately say he is planning a political comeback and that he will take on Congressman Luckey in 1938.

Radio fans thruout the district are talking about the young and brilliant newscaster, Foster May. Foster gave Luckey a run for his money in the 1936 primary although the newscaster made no campaign.

"I want to see enough local government at least to justify the existence of local officials' continuance in office," declared Governor Cochran during a recent press conference. "I do not like the present day trend away from local government or away from the responsibilities of local government. The way things have been leading during the last ten years it looks like the elimination of local county government."

The Lancaster County Young Men's Republican club has elected new officers as follows: Robert A. Nelson, president; Mrs. Phil Mockett, vice president; Mae Thacker, secretary, and Don Butler, treasurer. The following new members have also been appointed to the executive committee: John Brobst, publicity; Don Easterday, membership; Dwight Havens, revenue, Mary Janet McSachin, women's activity; Hugo Aspergren, coordination; Mrs. Fred Arnold, notification; Dale Phillippi, distribution, and Mrs. William Prussing, advisory. An invitation has been extended to the Nebraska Young Republican club to hold its next convention in Lincoln.
