

Uncle Sam Was Out Traded

A Nebraska man who has been in the navy a long time, was in the congressional office the other day to talk about the naval appropriation bill. He says that the two capital battleships which Uncle Sam is building are absolutely necessary for national defense even if they do cost sixty million dollars each to build.

One of the new ships we blew up and destroyed was the Washington—a brand new ship which was just finished and cost the taxpayers over thirty million dollars. But the Washington was only one of many ships we destroyed and which we are now replacing with millions of new money.

Foreign Rice For Beer

One of the biggest breweries in the country, the Heurich Brewery, is located near the statue of William Jennings Bryan in Potomac park. A visit to the brewery and an interview with the brew master shows that this brewery, like many others in our country, is now using rice instead of corn for the manufacture of beer.

Government Employees Organize In answer to questions regarding organization of government employees, it can be stated that practically all of the employees of the government departments are now in what is known here as the "AFGE."

Members usually pay 40 to 50 cents a month for membership and because of large numbers this membership runs into big sums when the final total is taken into consideration.

teas, parties and outings. They help the young men and women to get better acquainted and many times some of their grievances are taken care of by their organization.

Government Spends Thousands For Tolls

A war in Spain or China or any place on this globe costs the American taxpayer money. That fact became known in the discussion on the new appropriation bill for the state department. Very few people know it but trouble in Ethiopia or Russia may cost them thousands of dollars in telegraph tolls alone.

The department spent $52,290 for messages to and from Spain. That big amount for the Spanish trouble exclusively. Because of difficulties in Jerusalem recently, Uncle Sam spent $12,000 for the first six months on cables to and from there.

Broadcast News To Our Representatives Abroad

Uncle Sam uses the naval radio for China almost entirely and so the government doesn't pay anything for a large portion of Chinese telegrams. The Navy came to the taxpayers rescue during the Ethiopian trouble. Uncle Sam had to reach Ethiopia thru the French, Italian or British cables. The cost was tremendous and also there was danger of interruption. Then the navy radio operators solved the problem. They set up an American radio station at Addis Ababa and Uncle Sam carried on his own communication thru our navy wireless station in Ethiopia.

Uncle Sam sends out reports over the naval radio station nightly and the receiving sets pick these communications up in most foreign countries where Uncle Sam has representatives. The foreign countries allow Uncle Sam to have these receiving sets to pick up these messages from home but they will not give Uncle Sam permission to install broadcasting stations in the American foreign embassies.

The State Department has only one direct cable service and that is to the American Embassy at London. For the information of radio students who have inquired; the government does send some instructions to China via wireless but so far as code messages and important messages are concerned, these are sent either by cable or commercial radio except where direct communication by naval radio is available.
