SOUTHWEST BREEZES

cotton woods wave their plumes of heavy foliage. The apple and plum bloom has faded but the strawberries wink white petals from thrifty vines. A fragrance comes from the purple-flowered lilacs and there is no escaping the yellow dandelion.

Our state metropolis raises a lusty roar because its mayor would suppress indecency on the stage. Omaha has not been without the reputation of being able to furnish ample chance to indulge the taste for the shady in hangouts where it flourished "true to life." Perhaps the mayor has a notion it is superfluous to add also the make-believe for the amusement of an element that has itself classed as a "little too nice" to go where the real thing is. A bishop of a numerous body of church goers, which in the day of its greatest usefulness had the ban on all worldly amusements, goes out of his way to poke fun at the mayor. Suggestive lines from the stage may appear "cute" to a bishop, but the mayor evidently thinks the scriptural injunction to "let no filthy communication proceed out of your mouths," still holds.

The various groups of men who have seen service as soldiers are taking over at the county seat the Memorial Day exercises that formerly were in charge of the G. A. R. Whether there are any left of that honored organization in the county I do not know. Locally, another decoration day brings memories not alone of the hallowed slopes of Gettysburg and the bloody field of Antietam but of those who wore the G. A. R. badge and gathered at the old McCafferty hall on this occasion and in later years, at this risk, to pay tribute to those who had fallen in battle or since peace had come. Col. Towle, as orator of the day, would stir the patriotic emotions with the tongue of a Demosthenes. Comdars Mack, Slocomb, Slattery, Lowe, Skirving, Harding, Hatch, Pfunder, and father, and numerous others were always alive to the importance of the fitting observance of the day and were on the alert to restrain the youthful element which was disposed to celebrate with ball games and horse-races. Sons and grandsons who have worn the honored uniform on other battle fields will now keep alive the sentiment and memories clustering about Memorial Day.
