HECTIC POLITICS

The last days of July disclosed some tangled political scenes that seemed as weird as an Oriental nightmare to the average man who is seeking to keep his economic and social balance. The situation in New York City is a case in point. Senator Royal G. Copeland is reported to be about to seek the nomination for mayor of the metropolis on both the democratic and republican tickets. Mayor LaGuardia, the present city executive, is said to be contemplating the spurning of both partisan nominations with the intention of running this fall as a labor candidate and an independent.

Over in Philadelphia the mayor of the city of Brotherly Love, a New Deal republican, who was formerly regarded a democrat, is in a bitter verbal fight with Pennsylvania's governor who is a New Deal democrat and a former republican.

In Washington the Supreme Court bill had been sent back to committee apparently well scotched and Democratic Chairman Farley lost his first laurels as a prophet—he had predicted that the Supreme Court bill was "in the bag." And President Roosevelt took Progressive Senator LaFollette and Governor Phil LaFollette for a ride in his yacht.

Another phase of the situation was a blistering letter by Amos Pinchot, the former liberal leader, to President Roosevelt charging that three proposals to congress made since the election by the Chief Executive would, if placed on the statute books and "sustained by a packed Supreme Court, transfer our life into a bureaucratic collectivism" and in short, "wholly change the character of government and industry and put both under the personal domination of one man, namely, yourself."

And, in closing, Mr. Pinchot gave vent to this fine, if surprising, bit of irony: "Mr. President, sometimes I wonder at the state of mind of reformers—at their shining dreams and their sordid methods, at the recklessness with which they gamble with other people's lives and happiness. And above all, the fortitude with which they bear other people's distress."

Truly July with its Supreme Court fight, its charges and counter charges, and its crossed wires, has been a month of hectic politics. Perhaps we ought to blame it all on the heat. Is it possible that with the coming of October's bracing breezes and killing frosts, things will get back to normal again?

The Dress Reform party in England whose slogan is fewer, lighter and brighter clothes for men, says that men must "free their necks" as women did twenty years ago and show their knees. What will we do about the abdomen?

Representative Rankin denounces the N. L. R. B. and says it is ruining industries down in Mississippi. The obvious answer to the Mississippians is "well, everyone of you voted for it."
The government has paid out 22 billions to veterans and their families since the Revolutionary war. That's nothing. We will soon have paid out that much for relief since the 1933 social revolution.
The price of army mules has jumped from $161 to $175. Has Henry Wallace been plowing them under?

Farmer's Letter Indicates Need For Farm Relief

The following letter is typical of many received by Congressman Karl Stefan:

"Scotia, Nebr., July 17, 1937.—I want you to know the real conditions of farmers here. In 1934 we dried out—1935 raised feed, nothing to sell. 1936 dried out—1937 dried out, corn holding on, but can't much longer without rain. We have been living on hopes and half rations for four years. No gardens except a little early garden and not much to buy. Fruits and vegetables shipped in. It is sure getting monotonous living on half rations. Our cows and horses had nothing to eat all summer but weeds. We worked the horses on that diet, nothing to buy feed with. Most of the grass in pastures died out last summer and now the weeds are drying up. Lots of people have gone to the west coast, and many more talking of going. They think they can pick fruit out there and something to eat. Nebraska has raised lots of wheat this year, but not in Greley county, as it dried out here. People here are a thrifty energetic class of people. In the summer they have some eggs and cream to sell. But unless we raise some corn there won't be anything to feed the chickens and stock with as the hay meadows have turned to weeds too. If we had money we could buy feed, but our pocket-books are empty. People are talking of moving to the eastern states now, as it is about filled up on the west coast. If we don't get rain soon, what are we to do?

Farmer's Wife.

P. S.—"We also have too many grasshoppers."

Since receiving this letter, news comes from the third district of good rain and bountiful corn crop prospects, and those farm representatives who have been reading these reports are highly cheered.

While some of the eastern members and even some from the west, voted to sustain the President's veto, against continuing low interest rates on farm loans, the Prairie States group which helped to defeat this veto in the House, are highly cheered by the action of the Senate in overriding this veto.

The President wanted to veto the bill on the grounds that it would cost the government treasury about 40 million dollars, but those who had studied the question feel the President has been poorly advised to veto the farm bill. It should be known that about 250 thousand farmers in the United States are annually losing title to their farms, and continuing the low rate of interest on farm loans, will reduce one of the factors contributing to expanding relief rolls.

Experts here know that every year a million and a quarter people are thrown out of their homesteads because they cannot meet their financial burdens on the land. There has been no census taken and no one knows exactly how many farmers in the last five years have been forced to join the unemployed in our overcrowded cities, or to what extent these farmers have been forced to swell the great relief army. It is a well known fact, however, that the cost of their maintenance to the taxpayers runs into hundreds of millions of dollars.

Great economists agree that the farm problem is one of the chief sources of our economic depression, but the eastern industrialists can't see it that way. In fact among those who fought and are fighting against lower interest on loans to farmers are captains of high finance and their defenders in the House and Senate.

These financial economists do not see the "false economy" in their charge of "unsound economy" against any plan to loan money to farmers at a low rate of interest or otherwise to help farmers stay on their land.

Many members of the Prairie States Group figure it is sound economy for our government to borrow money from the city at 2½ per cent and re-lend it to the farmer at 3½ per cent thereby keeping millions of toilers from joining the ranks of unskilled unemployed labor, and enabling them to continue raising the food to sustain themselves. It is a well known fact here, that while there is considerable recovery recorded in the country, there are more people on direct relief than there were five years ago, and it would have been sound economy had the credit facilities of the government been used to lend, instead of give away billions of dollars. Some experts here feel that it is possible that millions of thrifty citizens would have been re-established economically and off the relief rolls if that idea had been followed out. Even these economists feel that the government should follow this American ideal and halt the annual dispossession of 250,000 farmers.
