SOUTHWEST BREEZES
By Romaine Saunders

Sixty head of beeves from the Watson ranch were in the Atkinson sale ring last week.

The president does some things that indicate he has a heart. Maybe better a heart than a head.

George Holcomb of Amelia made a periodical trip Sunday over into the far reaches of Swan precinct.

National farm organizations, like the labor unions, are headed by manipulators, not representative men out on the farms.

A prairie chicken, lone specimen of an expiring species, took to the air with the flutter of wings and thus announced there was at least one of those splendid native birds left on our prairie.

"Warning—$10 fine for driving horses faster than a walk on this bridge." If you remember the signs like that confronting you when approaching a bridge, move up into the old folks class.

China, with its more than four million square miles and four hundred million people ought to be able to take care of itself against a handful of what a friend of mine always referred to as "tame apes."

A home in the wide spaces of Nebraska's "sandhill" region is conducive of sane living. A youth leaping from the 85th story of a building and a 24-year-old farmer taking a 75-year-old bride could only happen in the congested east.

Mr. Landon hasn't been much of a talker about what to do or how to do it. He has been a doer and somehow got results. Some years of observation has shown, particularly among craftsmen—and the rule works pretty much in all lines—that the greatest talkers always had the least to show as accomplishment.

A group of society dames in Omaha arrayed themselves in the habiliments of the cowgirl for an evening's social function. Not the servicable overalls and boots and kindred vestments but the flashy regalia made for feminine fancy. Amusing to the old timers who can portray the spectacle of a delicate creature from soft society on the back of an orney cayuse roaming the prairie day after day blistered by heat and bitten by frost; worn to the bone at night, unroll her pack from the back of the saddle and fall to sleep on a bed of sod. Perhaps the glamour, the romance, the poetry, would soon perish. The human trait which loves the make-believe, the trappings for bellicose strut and show seems to need an outlet now and then. The ladies at least have a playful way of adding their contributions to a fading picture of a hectic period of the past.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Baker and Mr. and Mrs. Saunders went to Chambers Thursday evening. Unlike the picture Irving's master hand puts into words of the wife clinging as a tender vine, the gentlemen in this instance felt the overwhelming need at a critical hour of the moral support and heroic courage inspired only by the ladies, as they were going in on the excruciating mission laden with the agonizing butchery of having aching teeth taken out—extracted, as the professional would say. It wasn't half bad, though this humble pilgrim had to return next morning to have the bleeding checked, after a bloody and wakeful night.

Mrs. William Fryrear was hostess to the Helping Hand club on Thursday. Members of the club and a few guests were present. Following a bountiful 12 o'clock dinner, the study of the lesson, "Helping Our Deaf and Deaf-Blind," was led by the president of the club, Mrs. F. C. Watson. The lesson, furnished by the state Agricultural College at Lincoln, was an interesting treatise written by Rev. E. C. Siberson, minister of the First Church of the Deaf of Topeka, Kan. Mr. Siberson tells of his work with the deaf and how he became interested in such work, becoming sufficiently proficient in the sign language to preach a sermon with his fingers. The next meeting of the club will be at the home of Mrs. William Arnholt in Amelia.

The pink glow of October's last sunset marked off a period of remarkably warm and pleasant weather in the southwest. Beasts and birds, insects and creeping things have been scarcely less in evidence than in mid-summer. Grass growing, thus providing green autumn feed and conserving the hay. Most of the corn in this locality has been extracted from very loose husks, yields running from 10 to 25 bushels, considered not bad for a community which makes no pretensions of being a "corn country." A farmer from old Lancaster county, J. Gana, calling at this humble abode a day last week, with unmistakable frankness, said they were all broke down his way. He had a 60 acre field from which he would not get 20 bushels of corn all told. They have come to the end and are no longer able to carry on. In such communities lies the real "farm problem." Mr. Gana has turned to other activities to gain a livelihood, but he is still a farmer in all his ample proportions.

THE NEBRASKA SCENE

Republican insiders admit that Mr. Hoover and Mr. Landon are somewhat ruffled with each other; it is hard for two defeated presidential candidates to abide in the same wigwam and keep the peace.

National Committeeman Butler, without tooting of trumpets, attended the meeting of the republican national committee. Upon his return he probably will rival the humble oyster, so far as eloquence is concerned.

As for the aspiring candidates, none would make any comments on the speeches of the big chieftains—that is for publication. And what some actually said couldn't be printed anyway.

County Attorney Max Towle and Mayor Copeland, both of Lincoln, have been discussed as probable candidates for the republican nomination for governor. The gossip started from the fact that it does not seem likely that Kenneth Wherry of Pawnee City will enter the race. Along with this rumor comes the report that Wherry may be interested in the First district congressional contest.

The talk of the candidacy of Amos Thomas of Omaha has not been renewed lately; much the same condition applies to the advent of Sam Reynolds of Omaha into the race. Interest still centers about Hugh Brown of Kearney, Bob Armstrong of Auburn, and Charles J. Warner of Waverly as the likely republican aspirants for the governorship.

We understand the price of pork has gone so high the Indiana hogs are demanding gold rings.
