Across The Kitchen Table

with Blanche Pease

Good Morning! May I have the chair by the window? And don't scurry about making everything so perfect, my kitchen's often cluttered too. I like a house with a lived in look.

What a pretty apron you have on. Do you know aprons are a sort of a hobby of mine. I have a lot of them, in pretty prints and checks and even in plain colors. I watch for new apron patterns and when one strikes my fancy order it. Most apron patterns can be changed, in lots of different ways, such as pockets, trim, neck shape and such, so that patterns don't seem the same after all.

I keep on the watch for striking colors and designs in cotton goods. Usually I can find bias tape, rick-rack or like trim either to match, or to contrast with the material. It's really amazing what a clever trim will do for an apron, don't you think so?

Aprons which match dresses make nice sets to wear in the home. Very often little daughter is pleased to have an apron just like mother's—and in this day and age when mothers and daughters dress alike, it is an idea. But what would great-grandmother have thought, if she could see those just alike street outfits?

A clever apron makes a nice gift. Be sure you choose material which is colorfast and durable. A pattern which does not require a great deal of material can be selected and you can make one each for several friends. Tuck the left over material in the pocket to be used as patches and the lucky person who receives the gift will be doubly pleased.

I see you have a comfortable rocker by the south window. Now, that's an idea. And sure enough, there's "A Lantern in Her Hand" on the wide sill beside it. What a clever idea, one's book and mending handy, you can drop down while dinner waits and finish a sock, or read a chapter in the few minutes which otherwise might have been idly spent.

Have you read the rest of Bess Streeter Aldrich's books. They are all such good stories, and you don't know that she lives at Elmwood, Nebraska? No wonder, her books about Nebraska are so true to life and how well she knows human nature. I think her first book was "Rim of the Prairie" and then there is "Cutters" and a human book called "Mother Mason."

In a "White Bird Flying" we have a story of a modern Nebraska girl, told in interesting manner, while in "Miss Bishop" we have the story of a school teacher who came at long last, into her own. In Mrs. Aldrich's last book "Spring Came On Forever" Nebraska is again glorified and we learn more of her pioneer ancestry. Bess Streeter Aldrich also has a book of short stories under the title "The Man Who Caught the Weather" and the book is very good reading.

Before I go I want to give you those recipes which make the penny pinchers grin with delight—and aren't we all penny pinchers—if we aren't we ought to be.

Kidney Bean Hamburger
Two pounds of flank or round steak, have the butcher grind it for you. One chopped onion, 2 cups canned kidney beans, 2 tablespoons catsup, half teaspoonful Worcestershire sauce, one-third cup cooking fat, and salt and pepper.

Brown meat in cooking fat. Stir to prevent sticking. Add onion, catsup and Worcestershire sauce. Cover with hot water. Simmer 20 minutes. Add beans. Simmer 30 minutes. Serve hot. If you wish you can add a little chili powder. This serves eight people generously.

Hungarian Goulash
Two pounds chuck, 2 cups noodles 2 cups tomatoes, half cup diced celery, one green pepper, chopped, two teaspoons flour, 4 cloves, 1 cup diced salt pork, half cup diced onion, 2 cups diced carrots, 2 tablespoons minced parsley, salt and pepper.

Cut the beef in 1 inch tubes. Roll in flour. Combine pork and beef.

Cook until brown, stirring constantly. Add sufficient water to prevent sticking. Cover. Cook until meat is tender. Add vegetables, cloves and sufficient water to cover. Season to taste. Simmer until vegetables are tender. Serve cooked in boiling salted water. This serves six.

You Might Like to Try

Rubbing the inside of the chicken with the cut half of a lemon before putting in the stuffing. It will improve flavor.

PUBLIC SCHOOL NOTES

Pinky, our turtle, thinks his raft in the fish bowl one place where he can sit and laugh at the eight gold fish and two tiny bullheads. He'd like to see them try to come up and sit by him.

Everyone was weighed again last week and found that he had gained a little bit over October's weight.

Mystery: Are they baby fish, or aren't they? That is the question Mrs. Wilcox gave us a jar full of hundreds of leggy, whizzing, water mits that don't seem to be anything—yet. What are they?

Sixth Grade

The Fifth and Sixth grades gave a short Armistice day program Wednesday.

Nadine Kilpatrick is doing student teaching in our room. She has been teaching arithmetic for the past week.

Seventh Grade

Our class club was organized with the following officers: Meredith McKenna, president; Harold Calkins, vice president; Warren Burgess, secretary, Robert Bachman, treasurer. It would seem that the things were up to you, boys!

At a meeting this week, committees were chosen to oversee and make suggestions concerning the conduct of the class as a whole.

We have been studying Australia in our geography work and find that it is rather an unusual continent.

Grade basketball practice began this week. With ten seventh grade boys out it looks as if we have plenty of enthusiasm over it.

Eighth Grade

Verne Bishop entered our room Monday bringing our enrollment up to twenty-two.

In English the students originated and prepared some little short plays illustrating the value of good English. The better ones of these plays were presented before several of the other rooms.

The spelling class is very interested in watching the graph of the daily standing of the two sides. Friday the cardinals succeeded in passing the canaries. Mary Jane Morgan is the leader of the cardinals and Ruth Lawrence leader of the canaries.

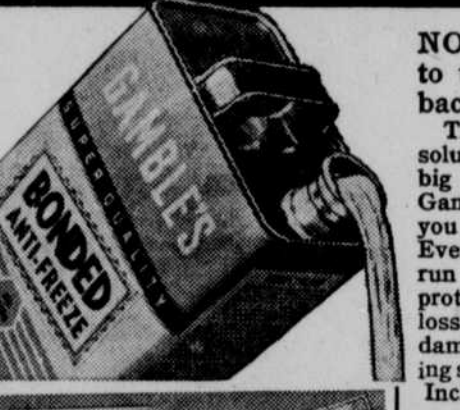

Students on the honor roll are: Jerry Toy and Keith Vincent.

The English class wrote stories on Helpfulness and a committee was appointed to judge the stories from the standpoint of content and mechanics. The result was Jerry Toy, first, and Genevieve Graves, second.
