SOUTHWEST BREEZES
By Romaine Saunders

Mr. and Mrs. Baker made a pre-Thanksgiving trip to Albion last week.

Old timers are beginning to feel they would rather pluck a rose than make a snowball.

Casper Addison and family were called to O'Neill last Friday by the death of Casper's father.

Mr. and Mrs. Roblyer of Atkinson were with Mr. and Mrs. Saunders for the Thanksgiving dinner.

The lure of the cups has deprived some of the old age pension. That same lure brought some of them to the need of a pension.

"Well, Bill, how was the crop?" "O my share after the renter gets his will about pay the taxes on that farm." A lot is said in behalf of the renter, but how about the landlord whose life's earnings are in the land, his share of the products of the same going to the tax gatherer?

Plato reduced a legend to letters to the effect that the primeval man had two faces. And according to gossip there are still two-faced specimens among us.

The population of Amelia is under 100 and its citizens have no municipal aspirations to organize even as a village. Under the rule of every man doing "that which is right in his own mind" order prevails and stands as a forceful object lesson to over-organized communities.

Hung on the wall in the spacious hall as you enter the court house is a tablet dedicated to the pioneers. It was to such as John Addison, who was laid to rest in the Mineola cemetery last Friday after the rites of Christian service at the Presbyterian church in O'Neill, that this tablet was engraved. In that period of the long ago, now only a memory, when north Nebraska beckoned to Iowa, Minnesota and the states beyond the Mississippi, John Addison with wagon and a splendid span of roans on his way to Holt county crossed the muddy

Missouri at Sioux City purposing to camp for the night at Covington, then a nest of male and female iniquity as the first thing to be encountered in Nebraska. Of strong moral fiber, a gallant and high regard for womanhood, which were characteristic of a long life, young John made camp a little further up the river.

When I first became acquainted with this pioneer he had not lived many years on the homestead which became his home until death. Though many years my senior an intimacy developed which enables me to speak with certainty of his worth as a man. John was one who exemplified a vanishing American type of the rugged individual. Grief, hardships, betrayed confidence, reverses and disappointments that would crush many another disturbed not his outward serenity, though inwardly moved by deep feelings and often heart-aches. His own reliability and rugged honesty gave him confidence in others and he more than once suffered wrong from the unscrupulous rather than cause trouble among neighbors. As husband, father, citizen, friend, John Addison will remain enshrined as one of the noble among us.

Retiring from this column for the present I do so with this unworthy tribute to the memory of a staunch friend.

To those who mourn: The passing centuries laden with the sorrow of the ages, beckon mankind to turn the tear-stained face to the cross that was placed on Calvary's hill that a despairing race might find its way back to God.

"O cross that liftest up my head I would not ask to hide from thee; I lay in dust life's glory dead And from the ground there blossoms red, Life that shall endle be."

NORTHEAST HOLT

The Ash Grove project club members and their families enjoyed a party at the school house in Dist. 49 on Friday, Nov. 26. Due to the inclement weather not all the members were present, but about 30 were there. The evening was spent in playing games and having contests. Pumpkin pie and coffee was served for lunch.

Mrs. Nettie Freeland Gibson visited ten days at the Frank Hunter home. She with her brother and parents lived in the Mineola country in the early days but it had been 41 years since she had been back to this country. Her home has been at Muncie, Ind., but since the death of her husband last spring she has been with her aunt at Decatur, Nebr. She found few of her old friends and school mates left here, and notices many changes in the country.
