Battle Jacket By EDWARD YEWDALL McClure Syndicate-WNU Features.

OHNNY MULFORD'S first approach to the girl was direct. He went straight up to her in the subway station and said, "Gee, you're the most beautiful thing I ever saw."

The girl gave him a look that was (1) startled, (2) contemptuous and (3) mad. She said, "On your way." Perhaps if she had known Johnny's long build-up before he found the courage to do what he did she would have been a little more receptive. It was like this: He had come back from the wars and gone to work for the Mulcahy Contracting Company on his old drawing board, after two months' loafing. He couldn't get through his red head that this building stuff was of the slightest moment. He couldn't, at first, get back to work. He couldn't get his mind on the beam.

After wandering around the house, worrying Mom to death, picking books out of the bookcase and reading a page or two, then putting them face down on the coffee table, the piano, the floor; after whitewashing the cellar and pruning the trees, he finally gave up and went into the office. The battle jacket with the shoulder patch embroidered with the "1" and "Guadalcanal" hung in the closet. He had never worn it since the day he got home.

He saw the girl the first day he went regularly to work. She boarded the bus at Poplar Street. She carried herself with a quiet dignity that became her blonde beauty; she was alone always. The girl's eyes reminded Johnny of the deep blue of the Pacific, and it seemed as if this was the girl he had been waiting for all his life. But the girl appeared to know nothing about that.

After a few weeks of long-distance admiration Johnny met Kline Harkins and, wonder of wonders, Kline knew something about the girl! If Kline had only been acquainted. things might have been settled one way or another right then. But Kline only lived near the girl, and she wasn't given to distant noddings. But Kline had a lot of dope. Her name was Hermance Taylor, she was twenty-two and worked in the Great American Insurance Company's office; her father was a dispatcher for the bus company. There was no boy friend in sight.

Six weeks passed. Once Johnny had the opportunity to give Hermance his seat in the a cool "Thank you," and sat down. After that Johnny ceased to exist.

After his rebuff in the subway station Johnny braced Kline Harkins to try to meet the girl through neighbors on Poplar Street, but Kline was too diffident and bashful himself for that. Anyway, Johnny calculated, Kline would like to meet the girl on his own account. This seemed a cockeyed reversal of the "Why don't and a magnificent thing to behold

October 10, 1848, was a great day in Chicago, for it was then that the brig "Buffalo" came into port with Chicago's first railway locomotive, the "Pioneer," on board.

True, it was a second-hand locomotive, though in excellent condition. Its one pair of driving wheels were directly under the cab; and its 10"-diameter cylinders tilted slightly rearward-the fashion of the day.

It was a magnificent thing to behold! And less than a month later, on its official run, many of Chicago's "Who's Who" made a short run west. There were directors, stockholders, business men and editors -the west's first passengers-who sat on seats fitted hastily into a couple of work cars to experience a new speed thrill.

Thus it was that Chicago and North Western became a living, moving reality.

Many years have passed since that first locomotive -the old "Pioneer"-went into honorable retirement. Today's mighty power plants are busy "keeping 'em rollin'" toward final victory. When you travel only when it is absolutely essential you help in this vital work. In the peace days to come, with its postwar plans finding ex-pression in new and even iner equipment, "North Western" will continue to serve - and serve well -the shippers and travel-ers of America.

The old "Pioneer" is now on display at the Museu of Stinnes and Industry, Jackson Park, Chicago accompanied by her parents, Mr. will keep house for him on his and Mrs. Charles Wegman. While there they visited at the home of Der Pol's husband is in the arm-Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Sazama and ed forces.

a loan and we'll think about buying a house, and from then on it'll be bills and mortgages and maybe a little Hermance and Johnny. And will I love it!" Early on Johnny's Saturday off, Mr. Mulcahy called him up. "Johnny," he said, "Mr. Henderson is here from Milwaukee. He wants to go over the machine shop layout with us, and I don't know a thing about it. Will you come in?" Well, Mother had sent his only civvy overcoat to the cleaners, and it wouldn't be back until night-a special concession at that. Mother said, "Put on the battle jacket, John. It's mild out. You ought to be proud of it." Johnny hated to wear any part of a uniform somehow, but there was nothing else to do. It was too cold for his suit, and as yet he possessed no topcoat. He sallied forth in the battle jacket.

Hermance hopped on the bus at Poplar Street. Her eyes passed Johnny with their cool impersonality and looked out the window. Something brought them back again, and they settled on the shoulder patch of Johnny's jacket, on the "1" and the "Guadalcanal."

In the subway station she came swiftly up to Johnny and said, "Pardon me, but I always wanted to shake hands with a man from Guadalcanal. I hope you won't think I'm forward." Johnny grinned and said, "No. I don't think you're forward. I think you're swell." and to sorthos is
