THE Black Hills fever is on the in crease, and notwithstanding the attitude of the Government and the unmentainty of the real existence of any sineral wealth, there are thousands making preparations to go as soon as there is grass sufficient for the teams. The action of the government, itself has the effect of calling attention to the country, and it is shrewdly surmined that the course pursued has been with a special view of calling attention to the country.

THE great map maker—the great Comstock, who represents the brains of the Lowell Register now comes to the front and opens that terrible mouth of his with a prolonged how that recembles the yell of a cross between a blood hound and the "yaller dog." He has just enough of the courage of the hound to howl, and the cowardice of the yellow cur, to lead him not to send his "yawp" down this way. In other words he didn't send us a copy of the paper containing his manifesto. It appeared, however, in his master's paper. In published at the paper containing his manifesto. It appeared, however, in his master's paper. In published at the paper containing his master's paper. It is being in their large hen-fruit. Its in his master's paper, published at Hastings, and entil we see proof to the contrary, shall assume that it is a correct copy. The article is hardly boy of that tender age to lay. - Hastings Journal. This sentence is an extract from last communication from the spirit world as expounded by the Senator. In this case it was a bring spirit that got hold of the Senstor. There was no fraud perpetrated in Webster county. The people voted as they saw fit and knowing all about the Hastings-Lowell combination repu disted it. The whole burden THE bitterness of the county-seat song is, and has been, that the people are not capable of voting except under the direction and supervision of some who has charge of the M. E. He did not even escape the ridicule of more than one of the Hasting's men who were present from time to time, until in an unfortunate moment-for himhe voted for the county seat bill, which raised him in their estimation from a mountebank to a statesman.

> Our townsmen, George and David Balentine, wintered a flock of three thousand sheep, in the Medicine Val-ley, on the borders of Nebraska and Kansas, and up to last week out of this large number, only four had died, and they were lost from the flock during the heaviest snow storm ever known in that part of the country. George is of the opinion that sheep raising in Nebraska is very profitable.
