WHAT has become of Stanley? "On Stanley on" there are more wild guesses to explore.

Exchange: "What's the difference," asked the teacher in arithmetic, between one yard and two yards? "A fence!" said Tommy Beales. Then Tommy set on a ruler fourteen times.

J. E. Smith returned Saturday evening from Red Cloud in the Republican Valley, and reports the prospects of that country as good and everything in a prosperous condition. The banking house of Smith Bros. & Thompson is fairly at work and prospects for a large and extensive business, are good. We regard Mr. Smith as one of the clearest-headed and most responsible business men in the west, and through his connection with the bank at Red Cloud that people will be greatly benefited.

Just as will come to her own again if the B. & M. puts her Republican Valley road at that point. The movement will be a great drawback to Hastings, as she well understands; for it not only makes a new point of attraction inconveniently near, but the road will run directly through a strip of country that now trades with Hastings, and will absorb that trade.—Friendville Telegraph.

A Mass Meeting of the citizens of Basin school district as it was originally, will be held at the school-house in said district on Saturday, Apr. 13, 1878, for the purpose of discussing the question of school bonds. Let every body turn out and give his views. By request of many CITIZENS.

TRACINGS OF HISTORY.

BY REV. J. M. PRYOR.

Hieroglyphology was not the written language of Egypt only but also of every country and nation whose scriptology cannot be traced back through the Greeks to the Syrians, i. e. the Israelites, from Cadmus to Moses. Such was the written language of Aztecs, and is the present scriptology of one third of the human race. It seems that the hieroglyphic was the utmost stretch to which the unaided powers of man could go in the invention of written language which bespeaks its origin in its merely mechanical character and its limitation as an organ of thought, being, in its nature incapable of further unfolding and improvement, and therefore of bodying forth the higher conceptions of the human mind; while the scriptology of which Moses received the rudiments from the Father of spirits on Mount Sinai,—which graven on stone tablets set forth the 10 commandments,—is organic in its nature and capable of indefinite development and expansion inasmuch as its primary elements like the constituent atoms of matter, are capable of a countless variety of disposition. As the first man had been taught the art of vocal speech by the process of classifying and naming the animals, so Moses, under the same Divine Father learned, the principle of all written language during those 40 days and nights on the mount,—just time enough for such a mind as his to go through the process of learning to distinguish the visible signs in which the law was written, and also to perceive their uses by means of diverse combinations.

Having found whence the primary elements of organic language were derived, let us now see the use that was made of them, or trace the process of linguistic development which took its rise from them. This consists of two departments,—the evolution of languages in the history of two of the greatest nations of the world. 1st, the development in the human mind of a receptivity, for Divine supernaturally communicated verities or conceptions through the formation of a language fitted for the conveyance of the same—of which the Israelitish nation was the chosen we claim.

And 2nd, the opening and expansion of the human mind for the admission of the aforesaid ideas or verities through the cultus which involved the formation of another language adapted to the purpose, which was the national life-work of ancient Greece.

Let us begin with the former. The nation of Israel was organized in the desert by Moses under a three-fold law. 1st. The moral law, the standard of character for all finite intelligences, adapted in form to the nature and world condition of man, 2nd. The civil law designed to maintain social order among the people, and preserve them as a nation in a corporate isolated capacity from all the surrounding nations and their corrupting debasing influences.

3rd. Their religious law regulating their religious practices and usages forming a system of object-teaching by means of pictorial representations the process of development under our consideration.

To explain this subject clearly and fully, we must premise, that human vocabulary or language is originally derived from the senses, i. e. from the organs and objects of sense because our primary ideas are those of material objects which the mind receives through the medium of the senses, to which our primary vocabulary necessarily corresponds being expressive of the exercises, organs and objects of the senses.
