Mr. Stewart's Remains.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16 .- It is stated upon authority so trustworthy as to leave but little, if any, doubt of the correctness of the report, that Mrs. A. T. Stewart has said to at least two persons, a gentleman and a lady, within the last six days, that the remains of her husband have been recovered; that they had been delivered to Judge Hilton, and that they have been placed by him in a secure vauit, well guarded, where they will remain until the completion of the crypt in the Stewart Memorial Cathedral in Garden City. It has been stated on equally trustworthy authority that Judge Hilton was ap-proached some weeks ago by the rep-resentative of a well known firm of lawyers in this city in reference to the restoration of the body. This, the law-yer said, could be effected upon certain conditions. First, that $100,000 in cash should be paid down when the body was procured. Second, that no questions whatever should be asked. Third, that a pledge of honor should be given that no attempt should be made to trace or to arrest the robbers. Negotiations upon this basis were begun and concluded ten days ago. Fifty thousand dollars in cash, instead of the $100,000 first asked, was paid. The identification of the remains was entirely satisfactory, and the body was taken to its present resting place.

Notwithstanding the publication of the statement that the body of A. T.

Stewart had been restored sobody in New York acknowledges having seen it. The police are ignorant of its re-covery, and Judge Hilton will not see the reporters.

Mew He Whiles Away the Time When the Sermon Gets Bry.

Mr. and Mrs. Prydea took their little boy to church Sunday. It was his first day to pants and his first time in the for the first half of the service he was fully absorbed in the things about him and the novelty of the situaupon himself, and he began to pay ex-clusive attention to his own wants, and Mr. and Mrs. Pryden, from an exultant Mr. and Mrs. Pryden, from an exultant feeling of pride, gradually slipped down an inclined plane of anxiety, which emptied into an abyse of despair. The number of positions the youth got into and the wants be manifested would seem incredulous had they not been witnessed by a score of respectable peo-ple. As soon as he took in a realizing sense of his own identity, Master Pry-den began to comprehend and respond to the demands of his nature. He got up on his knees on the seat and stared at the choir. He twisted back again to the front, and was only saved from falling to the floor by the afertness of his pa. The floor being thus suggested to him he got down on it; then he got up on the seat again. From this place he wanted to change to a position between his pa and ma. He was accommodated. After resting quietly there for er side of his pa. Thence he moved to his pa's lap! from there he went to the other side of his ma.

This was evidently a mistake, for he immediately expressed a wish to get sack to the other side of his pa, and on their tempting to lift him there he kicked and cried, and was only silenced by being allowed to walk the distance. which he did at once; the notion so pleased him that he went straightway back again and tried it over. Also for the second and third time; then he got up again between his pa and ma. this time he espied a gilt-backed book in the rack of the next pew, and reaching over to get it, came within an ace of depositing his entire careass on the other side, but was clutched in time by both his parents and hauled back, very red in the face and very indignant.

Disappointed in his venture; he turnof his attention to the rack in his own pew, and possessed himself of the books therein, which, being taken away from him, made it necessary that he should get them again: these he dropped on the floor one at a time, and smiled the guileless smile of infancy as they were icked up by his embarrassed parents. Pretty well exhausted he now prepared for sleep, and rested his head upon his mother's breast and closed his eyes His parents sighed. Then he slipped down upon the floor, sliding in such a way as to leave quite an expanse of a white goods behind his pants and jacket, and to roll the collar of his tacket ut on the back of his head.

His clothing was adjusted, his ma whispered in his ear for the fortieth time, and pa scowled so hard as to nearly dislodge his own scalp. His box saw the scowl, and sullenly sank down on the floor, from which he had to be lifted by main force; then he took out the hymn books again, and was going to drop them as before, when his painterfered and rescued them. He resented this liberty by throwing back his head, which, coming in sharp contact with the back of the seat, wrenched from his lips a sharp cry. The unhap-py mother endeavored to stiffe so much of the wall as she could not whisper away, while the pa's face was full of great drops of perspiration of which he himself was unconscious. This wail not abating, pa's knife, containing four blades, was brought into service, and then the cry hushed. For a full moment he was absorbed in the contemplation of this object. There was no carpet on the pew; two-thirds of the congregation raised from their seats, and Mr. Pryden himself came almost to a perpendicular. Then the hymn was given out and sung, and the benediction was pronounced, and Mr. and Mrs. Pryden, with their heir between them, started for home, Mr. Pryden being so warm that he took off his overcoat and gave a boy ten cents to carry it home for him.

The National Complaint.

Dyspepsia is the national complaint. Almost every other man or woman you meet has it, and the result is that the number of pseudoremedies for it is as numerous as Pharach's host. They are for the most part worthiess. There is, however, a searching eradicant of this distressing and obdurate malady, one whose genuine merits long since raised it to a foremost place among the staple medicines of America. Hostatter's Stomach Britism extirpates dyspepsia with greater certainty and promptitude than any known remedy, and is a most gental invigorant, appetizer and aid to secretion. These are not supply assertions, as thousands of our country men and women who have experienced its effects are sware, but are backed up by irrefragable proofs repeatedly laid before the public. The Bittern also promote a regular habit of body and give a healthful stimulus to the urinary organs. The National Complaint.
