LIFE'S UPS AND DOWNS.

The Story of a Woman Who Has Experienced Her Share of Each.

[From the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.]

The alternate sunshine and shade which are incident to some human lives have never been so strikingly illustrated as they are in the case of Mrs. J. M. Louis Hunter, who has been a Southern belle and heiress; the fiancée of a Confederate General; the wife of a noted politician related to a United States Senator; the sister-in-law of the Governor of a State; one of the society women of that wonderful and dazzling metropolitan city, Washington, D. C.;

and in the past half century she has had her share of almost every variety of fortune that fortune can bestow. She is now a widow, and has been a widow for many years. Her husband, a man of remarkable force of character, and out of the storm marks which misfortunes have made upon her face there are the unmistakable traces of high breeding and intelligence, and enough left to make one sure that some time in her life she has been a woman of high rank.

She came to St. Louis on the 29th day of August, and was received here by Capt. Lee, who was then Acting Chief of Police. She was then screened from public view, and she desired a place to live, and she desired friends to whom she could go without intrusion and obtain the necessities of life. Capt. Lee took her case in hand, and procured a room for her on Washington Avenue. He presented her to the attention of some of the wealthy people of St. Louis, who never permitted her to suffer. A few days ago she received the pass for her condition would become public, and asked Capt. Lee to obtain a pass for her to Hot Springs, where she has some friends who, it is said, would have contributed to her wants before this had they known the dire distress upon which she has been passing.

Before the war she was the owner of 1,000 acres of land in Virginia. She was then what is called a rich woman. She had the traditions of nobility attached to her family name; she had the finish which true culture and nobility always give; she was a woman who had traveled all over the world, and she had made a store-house of all that makes true womanhood admirable. It was at this time that she was wooed by a dashing young Virginian. She gave him the promise of her hand, and she was of a two-fold nature, partaking of the nature of that which makes the sweetest music in the heart and helps "the world to revolve," and she was also a woman whose hands she entrusted the estate, and she was a woman who was a woman of high rank.
