Delmonico's Advice to a Young Man About A young man who had been ambiant cook in a Chicago Hotel, having saved a little money, concluded he would go to New York and try his fortune. He reasoned with him-self that Delmonico would not live always, and fancied that he might one day become the future Delmonico of New York. On reaching the city he sent his letter of infro-duction to the famous restaurant keeper and solicited advice. Deimonico listened attentively to the young man's inquiries, and finally told him: "Get, first, a good location, then get the best cook you can hire, see that our waiters are attentive and polite, and buy only the best in the market. And still all of this you can do and not give sailafaction.
