A CHRISTMAS WISIL I'd like a stocking made for a giant, And a meeting-house full of t ys. Then I'd go out in a happy hunt For poor little girls and boys; p the street, and down the street, And across and over the town I'd search and find hem every one Before the sun went down.

One would want a new jack-knife Sharp enough to cut; One would long for a doli with hair, And eyes that open and shut; One would ask for a china set With dishes all to her mind; One would wish a Nonh's ark With beasts of every kind.

Some would like a doll's cook-stove And a little toy wash-tub; Some would prefer a little drum For a noisy rub-a-dub-dub. Some would wish for a story book. And some for a new set of blocks; Some would be wild with happiness

Over a new tool-box.

And some would rather have little shoes And other things warm to wear; for many children are very poor, And the winter is hard to bea I'd buy soft flannels for little frocks, And a thousand stockings or so, And the jolliest little coats and cloaks To keep out the frost and snow

I'd load a wagon with carameis, And candy of every kind.

And buy all the almond and pecan nuts

And taffy that I could find. And barrels and barre's of oranges I'd scatter right in the way. So the children would find them the very

Students in Revolt.

There is an open revolt among some of the students of Palatinate College, an but not remarkably nourishing institution under the control of the Reformed Church, at Myerstown, Lebanon County, Pa. The college has two flourishing literary societies. Some time ago. one of them, the Palatinate Literary Society, held its annual exercises in the chapel of the college. The principal, Dr. Russell, demanded five dollars' rent for the use of the chapel and sent in his bill to the society. This was laid before the society, and the question for its payment being put before the society was resolved not to grant the amount demanded from the treasury.
