THE CHIEF.

FRIDAY, MARCH 2, 1883.

A dog fight occurred in the north part of town the fore part of the week which was the source of a good deal of merriment to those who witnessed it. The combatants were Mr. Ballard's watch dog and one of the editors of the Chief. It seems that the editor in his wanderings strayed to near the dog's kennel, which provoked the animal to his instincts, disputed by snapping at the intruder's heels. This so enraged the valiant Don Quixote of the Chief that he hastily sought a club and returning to the dog's kennel the fight commenced in earnest. The battle raged furiously for a brief time but the result is best told in these lines:

"On Linden when the sun was low,
All bloodless lay the untrodden snow,
Which indicates that the dog, being securely chained, was a fœgan worthy of his adversary's steel. Argus

Whom Satan most devoutly loveth.
Is one who maketh, loveth, and telleth a lie.
As the Argus man did, of the dog that ought to die.
Preferring of choice, the service of Satan's cause,
To that of his maker, God, and keeping of his law.

The dog was not in a kennel, as Kennedy did know,
And his chain long enough, to reach where men had right to go.
He not only "snapped at the heels" but he lay like wild war,
And pulled till the clothes of the man in shreds he tore.
And this was not the first time, dog failed to be mild,
For twice before he accented, and worried a child.
Now laud Kennedy, the dog, or the man of the Chief,
And if this be not true, call author a liar, or thief.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.
WASHINGTON, FEB. 19, 1883.
Washington fell asleep last night to the lullaby of a pelting rain, but while it slept the rain succumbed to a driving snowstorm, and it awoke this morning to find itself beautifully attired in a robe of immaculate white. The city has been so long deluged with rain, saturated with mist, and blinded by fog that every body is sick and languishing for a sniff of unadulterated pure air. During the week the sun has succeeded in penetrating the dense pall of clouds only two or three times momentarily; just to give assurance of his continued existence, but never remained long enough to inspire confidence in his power to permanently dispel the gloom. While the people here appreciate fine weather quite as much as ever, they have learned through habit that they can exist without it and even are entertained, so they no longer expect any thing better, and have resigned themselves good naturedly to the trifling heavens. Rather than be thwarted, they just put on gossamers, rubbers, and umbrellas, and wade two miles if necessary. They do not think it too trying even to stand in line on the sidewalk for two hours during an opening morning for the sale of opera tickets. The Washington public does not have an opportunity of listening to Italian opera every week, and the sale of tickets for the season beginning to-night has been an unprecedentedly exorbitant prices. The incomparable Patti will sing but twice during the week for nine thousand dollars. She has never sung of tenor, which is the secret of her voice. She has never been heard here, and the curiosity in regard to the "greatest living soprano" amounts to a popular craze. There was a regular stampede for seats for "Patti nights," few persons feeling they could survive a failure to hear a few strains, at least, of that world famous voice.

Both houses of Congress are in a chaotic state on the tariff question difficult to describe. They are simply doing nothing, unless killing time can be considered occupation. The senators and members whose time expires with the present Congress have no incentive to hard work because they have no future but private life, while those who have been re-elected feel that since they have a future in which to atone or carve they can afford to let matters go easy for the few remaining days in session. Mr. Haskell, of Kansas, raised a little breeze in the House Saturday afternoon by a motion to limit all debate on the pending section of the tariff bill to one hour. The effect of this would have been to have carried the progress of the bill from page forty-four to one hundred and forty six pages without any debate at all. Of course the object of this was to close debate on the tariff bill, but the democratic members at once made points of order against the motion, holding that all tax and revenue bills are to be considered by classes and not by sections. The discussion was cut off by enclaves upon the late representative Shackelford, of North Carolina. It has been wisely suggested that in the future the delivery of enclaves on deceased senators and members should in all cases take place at a special session to be held on Sunday. Congressmen will continue to die, but it is hardly just that the interest of the whole nation be set aside even for an hour, because of these occurrences. It had been thought that absolute free trade was well represented in Congress, but this has proved a great mistake, there being only three or four free traders now, every man having become a protectionist as soon as he was elected. They may be divided into three classes: the logical protectionist, who argues in favor of making the protection general, and including every material interest that demands assistance regardless whether it exists in many states or only one; the other class of protectionists believe in protecting their own sections and constituents, and deny protection to the sections and constituents of other senators and members.

The crumk court room has been crowded for the past few days with an expectant throng anxious to hear what Ruffell can tell about Durey and Brady, his late confederates in the protection in the Star Route cases. His testimony explains and corroborates much that has gone before. The Government's case has been clinched so firmly that the defendant and his attorney while the defendant are sick with a sickness that can neither be concealed nor mistaken.

The safest way to restore the youthful color of the hair is furnished by Parker's Hair Balsam, which is deservedly popular for its superior qualities.
