How Watch Cases are Made

This process of manufacture was invented by James Ross, who started in 1854, and the methods and machines used in making these watch cases are patented. This is the only way of making these goods which is so popular and which is gradually the public has learned that the

James Ross' Gold Watch Case is not a cheap gold-plated or electroplated article, but was made of genuine steel of standard quality and thickness and adherence to the determining the best watch case ever put on the market, and the adoption of every suggestion, has made the

James Ross' Gold Watch Case the STANDARD.

In this watch case the most subject to wear—the thumb-screws, etc., are made of the same material.
