

HOME, FARM AND GARDEN.

Any falling off in the condition of farm stock should be strictly guarded against as cold weather approaches. Pastures beyond their prime need to be reinforced by roots, fodder-corn, or other food...

Stewed Beets: Boil them first the usual way, then scrape and slice them, put them into a stewpan with a piece of butter rolled in flour...

Potatoes should be dug nearly as soon as the tops have dried down, or rather whether they are intended for marketing at once or to be put in the cellar...

Whitening the hands which can be used without harm. Glycerine, vaseline, cold cream or amonion tallow rubbed in will do much to soften them.

Fitting Stock for Winter.

When stock has been fitted for roughing it, which, of course, means feeding up in most cold weather, the owner is in a position to choose between carrying on to spring or longer, or sending forward to market at any time...

Hence the wisdom of seeing to it early in the season, while flesh is easily acquired, that the gain is put on which is sure to require when the mercury falls low down in the tubes...

The honey crop of the present year is not up to the standard either in quantity or quality. In some localities the so-called "honey-dew" has been so abundant...

But to come a worse trouble, and it is of a twofold nature, we refer to the uses to which this so-called "honey-dew" secretion is put, when gathered by the bees...

The other point of the "caution" which we would give, is this: If the fall crop of honey should be a poor one, the bees may have nothing upon which to subsist during the coming winter...

An Accommodating Host. A few years since a St. Paul drummer was traveling across Dakota in what the proprietor promptly designated a stage...

"The Best Fertilizer." "What fertilizer is best for vegetables?" Taking all things into consideration, nothing has given me such complete satisfaction for all occasions...

"I shall help you to some of the hog, stranger?" "No, I never eat pork." "Try some of the beans, then." "Not any beans for me, thank you."

Horses should not be allowed to drink cold water when heated. It produces colic.—Troy Times.

Wah Lee Yon's Bride.

A bustling, surging crowd of several hundred men, composed of lawyers, merchants, and even ministers, crowded into Justice Gleason's court to witness the solemn marriage rites of Wah Lee Yon and Mary Shaffer.

They made their way to a corner of his office, and there and then the twin were made one. Wah Lee is a tall, middle-aged Celestial with an intelligent look, superior to most of his kind...

It is the chief misfortune and limitation of women that their aims are petty. When these are conscientiously put, as in the misguided struggle for decoration, it is naturally difficult to substitute larger aims.

The Gulf of Mexico and Its Stream. At the American Science Association in Philadelphia, Prof. J. E. Hilgard read a paper on the "Relative Level of the Atlantic Ocean and Gulf of Mexico."

On the Salt Ste. Marie. St. Mary's River separates American and Canadian territory and empties into Lake Huron with the vast fresh water sea of Lake Superior.

Deseret Reward. A party of tired travelers sat around the door of a country hotel in Arkansas. The proprietor, a gray old fellow, sat on a crate in front of them.

The Comanche Indians are said to be starving. There is no reason why the Comanches should starve. Let some New York body of fashion come away with her belongings.

The Sault Ste. Marie is historic. Though these eddying rapids passed the first pioneers and explorers of the unknown West, the Jesuits, the Jolietts, the Hennepins and not far from their rushing waters, in Michilimackinac, lie the bones of Marquette, the explorer of the Mississippi.

Crazy Work and Sane Work.

We were asked lately to join in a raffle for a "varay" quilt made up of nine thousand scraps of silk and satin set together with much ingenuity of design and cleverness of stitching.

It is the chief misfortune and limitation of women that their aims are petty. When these are conscientiously put, as in the misguided struggle for decoration, it is naturally difficult to substitute larger aims.

They who see that civilization waits for the advancement of women entrust to them to prefer the intellectual life. But this does not imply constant companionship with books.

A Drummer Sold. "I wonder if that pretty girl over there is not a flirt," said one drummer to another on an incoming Illinois central train.

"You are a liar." "I am not a liar," said the woman, modestly. "My friend over there says he has known you for some time."

He Tumbled at Last.

It was long past the hour when he ought to have gone, and would if he had noticed the paper, but he was so busy in her handwriting, but he hung on and hung on, like a porcupine plaster in a hot day.

And when she was through the first verse he wanted to know, in a faint, "If she remembered when she had laid his hat, and when she produced it with singular swiftness, and asked, with some surprise, if he was going, he explained that he had intended to all the evening, but it had slipped his mind.

Forty years ago a named Levi went to continue about Beethoven, Pa., and became a pianist and perfectly happy. From a fairly developed boy he became quite a dandy, and he remained so ever since.

King John, of Albania, has sent Queen Victoria a monkey. Now if some one will present her with a barrel organ, the Greek family will have an opportunity to earn a living.—Pittsburg Eagle.
