A VALENTINE.

A Valentine! Ah, can it be, That some one has addressed to me These lines so sweet and tender? Name or initial is not set Upon the page, and yet and yet I think I know the sender.

What though the writing be disguised, And many a little trick devised To aid the fond deception: St. Valentine provides the key That spoils the little mystery

The inoment of reception.

How easy we detect the signs, And read the words between the lines, Noother eyes discover! And thus the secret ne or confessed By word of mouth is plainly guessed fly weetheart or by lover.

We may be right, we may be wrong: For lack of confirmation strong We give the rem to funcy. And let ber wander at her will, And her beight destiny fuifill In fields of the remancy.

And Valentines would lose their charm If they at once could doubt disarm Ere yet the soni was broken; And so the deeper the discusse, The more delightful the surprise. And sweeter is the token.

For I confess that from a host, The one I we always prized the most-Time has new beauty lent it-Is this poor, faded Volentine; Because I never could divine Just who it was that soul it.
