

POETS ABOUT CHINA.

After an absence of twenty-five years in China, George Dean returned to New York two weeks ago with the intention of remaining. His mother, three sisters, and a brother live in the same house he had been born in.

"I miss so many things and everything seems so different here," he said. "I miss the 'old days,' the 'old life'—the old Jim Enright in winter, the 'old head of cats' they do in China and in this winter here."

"Why do you believe me?" he was asked, and my dear old mother was really a little taken aback. It is all of my being thoroughly Chinese. It is only the process of becoming Chinese for a son to buy a coffin for his living father. In fact it is expected that he will do so if he is possessed of sufficient filial regard.

"The other day my nephew, a young man whom I like very much, asked me what I thought would be a nice thing for him to buy as a present for his father at Christmas. I answered at once: 'The very best coffin you can afford.'"

The Growth of Anti-Sacerdotalism.

Passing over that period during which ecclesiastical power throughout Europe was rising to its climax, we come, in the twelfth century, to dissenters of more advanced types who with or without differences of doctrine, rebelled against the then-existing church government.

Over in England in a great house thirty or forty servants is no unusual number, and when there is a house party as many as 100 are often assembled.
