Chinames and Chinames.

I have learned, writes H. Sherwin in the Overland Monthly, that there are Chinamen and Chinamen. As well judge the Maine farmer lad by the New York city arab as the well-bred, honest, stendy young fellow from the rice farms up the river from Canton, by the Hong Kong street cooly or dock rat. Most people are quite without discrimination in selecting a Chinese workman, and seem to think it is pure luck whether they get a clear-skinned, bright-cycl boy, modest, intelligent, and trustworthy, or a hard-looking old opium smoker. It is perio thy possible to select with some certainty; but the only way I know to do it is to be acquainted with some sensible, trustworthy Chinaman, and explain to him what you want, and if it is his opinion that you will be a fair and agreeable employer. whom he can feel justified in recommending to his friends, you will, as soon as he can find the right man, be very satisfactorily supplied. But if you have a bad reputation as an employerif you are unreasonable or bad pay or unpleasant in your ways and inconsiderate of a servant's feelings, you will be politely told, month after month, that no suitable boy has yet been found. For these farmers boys are self-respecting fellows. They will not take insulting treatment, nor even rough jokes; they will not bear aggressions on their personal dignity. I have known one of them to leave a place because some article of food was locked up from him. on the ground that there was only enough to go around the family; yet he would, probably, if nothing had been said to him, have estimated that someone must go without, and silently refrained from taking any himself, as I have often known them to do, even when it was a favorite dish. Many a household has been suddenly deprived of its very satisfactory cook because someone had mocked him rudely or put hands on him roughly. It is worth while to note this, in view of the popular idea that a Chinaman will go anywhere and endure anything for money. On the contrary, many of this class of Chinamen will throw up a paying positio and remain some time out of work sooner than receive indignity.

They are, in fact-I speak for my cwn nequaintance among them; others may have a different experience-gentlemen. They show instinctively a simple refinement and careful breeding. In my own home we have in more than a dozen years had only two cooks, handsome young fellows from the same village; and in all these years, spent under the same roof, in the isolation of a country house, I may say that I have had pretty fair opportunity to know these boys. And I have found them both essentially gentlemen. I have never seen a European foreigner of their humble class who approached them in refinement, simple dignity, and unfailing sense of propriety. I do not know how many of our own boys could go to a foreign land and earry off such a position so well. In a somewhat eruder way, the farm hands that I have seen much of show the same native refinement and propriety, though they are often bashful and awkward. And I do not doubt that they all have been, in fact, carefully bred in their simple homes by painstaking parents. When they become cartain that you intend no ridicule, and will listen with entire respect, they will tell you a little about their homes, and from their fragmentary ac-counts it is easy to get an idea of the plain, honest, and temperate peasantry from which they come; and it is an idea that must give one a sincere respect for

Roofs of Paper.

A roof pronounced superior to that of slate because of its lightness and other advantages is now made of any fibrous pulp, says the Boston Journal of Commerce. From this material tiles of any proof mixture. After the baking the tiles are treated to a mixture imparting an enameled surface; to this is added a coating of sand, whereby the pulp is rendered proof against the action of heat or flame. By the use of different colored sands a variety of tints may be imparted to the tiles, which, after the application of the enameling mixture and sands, are baked a second time. application of the enameling mixture and sands, are baked a second time, after which they are ready for use. Besides the inherent lightness of pulp tiles, which obviates the necessity of a heavy frame to support a weighty roof, the pulp tile, being tough and not brittle like slate is far less liable to be broken from blows, stones thrown upon them, or human footsteps. Again, slate tiles cannot be laid compactly together on a roof on account of their brittleness, which prevents their being drawn tight.

Some Good Advice.

It is said that the wine-cup has oceasionally circulated among the legislators, and some have even achieved celebrity by this convivial disposition. Of one who has since achieved reputation as a lawyer the following story circu-lated among his legislative friends. He attended a ball one evening, and in the course of the fistivities he became somewhat too joyous. Seeing this, one of his friends approached him and advised him to seek his room and hed. The young lawyer said nothing, but with great solemnity took a dollar bill from his packet and thrust it into the hand of his friend.

A TRIP TO COLFAX SPRINGS

Colfax Springs, on the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad, is a popular bealth resort to which many Western people go to try the waters, which are noted for their healing properties. They are claimed to be beneficial for rheumatism and kindred troubles. Mr. Charles P. Griffin, a butcher of Stuart, Ia., recently made a trial of them and, while they appear to have done him some good, be afterwards discovered a cure which proved infinitely more efficacious. He

"My attack was a very severe one, and "My attack was a very severe one, and for three months I was compelled to close my store, as I was not able to attend to business at all. My joints were swollen and there did not seem to be any part of my body that did not ache. After suffering in this way until the pain was almost beyond endurance I went to Colfax Springs to try the effects of the waters. The day I left home I had to be carried down stairs. After remaining at the down stairs. After remaining at the Springs a month I came back home feeling somewhat better. A few weeks later, however, I had a relapse which prostrated me the same as before. It was at that time that I learned of Athlophoros. I sent for a bottle of it, and in fifteen minutes after I had taken the first dose I felt the effects of it, and when I had finished my third bottle I was well. I have not had any rheumatism since and have attended to my business every day, which is a thorough test, as I am obliged to be out all kinds of weather and at all seasons of the year. If I had known of Athlophoros in the first place it would have saved me hundreds of dollars and the detriment to my business in closing my store. I take great pleasure in recommending it to others."

"Rheumatism," he says, "has been my most serious trouble until about a year ago, when I used a bottle of Athlophoros. Since that time I have not had a twinge of it. Previously I had been subject to sciatic rheumatism for several years, many times so badly that I could scarcely drag myself around. When I commenced with Athlophores my legs were so stiff that I could phores my legs were so still that I could scarcely get up the steps to my office. But I am not troubled that way now, and the joints of my legs are as free as they ever were. I had tried so many remedies before that I had no faith in Athlophores when I began with it, but I changed my mind after I had taken a few doses and found relief. All I used was one bettle It is the grandest medicine ever heard of for rheumatism. My wife has also used Athlophores with success equal to mine."

"During the years I have been in business," says O. E. Givins, a druggist at Stuart, Mr. Griffin's home, "I have sold many different kinds of proprietary medicines but none that has given such universal satisfaction as Athlophoros has for rheumatism. I always feel when I hand out a bottle of that medicine to a customer that I am giving him the full value of his money. Since I have seen its wonderful effects among my customers I gladly recommend it in every instance for rheumatism."

If you cannot get ATHLOPHOROS of your druggest, we will send it express paid, on receipt of regular price—one dollar per bottle. We prefer that you buy it from your druggist, but if he basn't it, do not be persuaded to try assething else, but order at once from us, as directed. ATHLOPHOROS Co., 122 Wall Street, New York.

Bill Nye says of his experience at the Fifth Avenue Hotel: "I found something yesterday at the table that bothered. It was a new kind of a silver dingus, with two handles to it, for getting a lump of sugar into your tea. I saw right away that it was for that, but when I took the two handles in my hand like a nutcracker and tried to scoop up a lump of sugar with it I felt embarrassed. Several people who were total strangers to me smiled.
