Accompanying them also were General P. Collins, of Massachusetts, and Hon. S. M. White, of California. At one o'clock they started for Judge Thurman's residence, and it was announced that the meeting would be in that portion occupied by his son. The party was received in the north reception room of A. W. Thurman's residence, which hat been decked with flowers and plants. General Collins and Mayor Jacobs, of Louisville, were at the head of the room in front of were met at the depot by a great the window, the other members of the committee and the various gentlemen present arranging themselves in a semi circle and all awaited the entrance of Judge the Republican National Committee from Thurman, who speedily made his appearance from the drawing room on the south. Judge Thurman was greeted with a burst of applause as he came forward leaning on the arm of his son, A. W. Thurman. It was an impressive sight and one well calculated to accompany the scene about to be completed.

As soon as Judge Thurman had taken his seat and bowed to the gentlemen standing ready to receive him, General Collins advanced, and, after shaking him by the hand, spoke as follows: "Judge Thurman, we bear a message from the great council of your party. It is but a formal notice of your nomination by that body for the high office of Vice-President of the United States. Rich as our language is in power and expression, it contains no words to adequately convey the sentiment of that convention as its heart went out to you. I present my friend, Hon. Charles D. Amid profound effence Judge Thurman roke as follows:

Mr. Chairman an ! gentlemen of the committee: I pray you to accept my very sincere thanks for the kind and courteous manner in which you have communicated to me the official information of my nomination by the St. Louis convention. You know without saying it that I am profoundly grateful to the convention and to the Democratic party for the honor conferred upon me, and the more so, that it was wholly unsought and undesired by me. Not that I undervalued a distinction which any man of our party, however eminent, might highly prize, but simply because I have ceased to be ambitious of public life. But when I am told in so earnest tates of judgment, by the sense of obligation fervent hope that the party may long contin e to be able to serve the Republic-what can I, under such circumstances, do but yield my private wishes to the demands of those whose Gentlemen, with an unfeigned diffidence in my ability to fulfill the expectations that led to my nomination, I vet feel it to be my duty to accept it and do all that it may be in my power to do to merit so marked a distinction. tlemen, the country is blessed by an able and honest administration of the General Govern-ment. [Applause] We have a President who wisely, bravely, diligently and pa-triotically discharges the duties of his high office. [Applause.] I fully believe that the best interests of the country require his reelection, and the hope that I may be able to contribute somewhat to bring about the result is one of my motives for acce ting a place on our ticket. I also feel it my duty to labor for reduction of taxes and to put a stop to that accumulation of a surplus in the treasury that in my judgment is not only prejudical to our financial welfare, but is in a high degree dangerous to our bonest and Constitutional Government. [Applause.] I suppose, gentlemen, that I need say no more to-day. In due time and in accordance with established usage I will transmit to your chairman a written acceptance of my nomination, with such observations upon publie questions as may seem to me to be proper.

Every one remarked that Judge Thurman appeared vigorous and earnest, and old friends say they have not seen him so vivacious and bappy for months.

I alluded. I remember that summer day when, equipped and armed, we were called to leave our homes and cross the Ohio river and enter the territory that was in arms against the Government which we had sworn to support. I recall with you the tender parting. the wringing of hearts with which we left those we loved: I recall the high and buoyant deter ination, the resolute carriage with which you went to do your part in the work of suppressing the great rebellion: I remember the scene; through which we went in that hard disciplin of service and sickness, and all of those hard York Life building was to-day the scene of incidents which are necessary to convert citi-three sudden and violent deaths. On a gens into veterans. I rember especi lly that layers, Dick Thorn, Gus Clifford and Billy the Resaca hill where we left those gallant comrades who fell in that desperate charge: I remember through it all the gallantry, devotion and steadfastness, the high set patriotism you always exhibited: I remember how, after sweep ing down with Sherman from Chattanooga to the sea and up again through the Carolinas and 4 Virginia, you, with those gallant armies that and entered the gate of the South by Louisville fender put in place along the third story and Vicksburg, marched in the great review up the grand avenue of our Nation's capital. I remember that proud scene of which we were part that day and glad rejoicing as our faces were turned homeward, the applause which greeted us as the banner of our regiment was now and then recognized by some home friends who had gathered to see us-the whole course of these incidents, of battle, of sickness, of death, of victory, crowned thus by the triumphant reassertion of National authority and by the muster out and our return to those homes that wearing a small, black mustache.
