

"Eternal Vigilance is the Price of Liberty," and One Dollar a year is the Price of The Chief.

Vol. 17.

RED CLOUD, WEBSTER COUNTY, NEB., FRIDAY, JANUARY 10, 1890.

No. 24.

A MAN KILLED For not using Miles T. Hayes' Patent Collar who has been working a number of years upon different methods of opening a collar at the bottom, keeping the one idea in view, that of retaining the lightness, strength and durability of the whole collar, and add to it the advantages of rapidity and ease of adjustment, absolute perfection of fitting—and most important of all—obtaining flexibility at the throat, by yielding to the pressure of the shoulder while working.

First—It prevents breaking the collar at the throat.

Second—It avoids the removing of sweat pads from the collar.

Third—The advantages of putting on a collar with this fastener, in cases where the horses are very troublesome, is very great.

Fourth—It saves slipping the collar over the head and injuring the eyes of the horse, and most of all, the trouble of buckling and unbuckling at the top.

Fifth—The collar being perfectly flexible at the throat, conforms quickly to the shoulders of the horse, making an easy and adjustable collar which will not gall the shoulders.

The North American REVIEW

Now is the time to Subscribe.

Arrangements have been made for the coming year which will maintain for the Review its unrivaled position among periodicals, and render it essential to every citizen in America who desires to keep abreast of the times. From month to month issues of commanding interest in every field of human thought and action will be crisscrossed in its pages by representative writers, whose words and names carry authority with them. The forthcoming volume will be dignified by the eloquence of quotations of high public interest by the foremost men of the time, notably by a controversy on free trade and protection in their leading organs, and the development of America's industrial and commercial interests, the two most important living industries of England and America. The North American Review is a monthly journal, published in New York, and is a complete and authoritative source of information on all subjects of interest to the American people. It is a complete and authoritative source of information on all subjects of interest to the American people.
