Enslings in Nebraska.
Our friend, Mr. Lester of Inavale, is a practical farmer. This last fall he cut up 15 tons of cornstalks, dug a pit in the ground, large enough to hold it, put on a coat of straw and two feet of dirt, and now has one of the best feeds that a cow ever eat, it is green and nice and very wholesome. This is called ensilage. One thing that all our farmers is the lack of saving their feed. The stalks are easily cut up in a feed cutter, and the preparation of the trench is but little work, and the result is great. Usually farmers turn their stalks into the stalks, and soon they are wasted, but by the other way is made to count and is much better and goes farther and makes cattle fatter. It is no new hobby but has been tried in the east for many years very successfully. Next season Mr. Lester proposes to put up 30 or 40 tons. It is our opinion that the farmers alliances should take this matter up and thoroughly discuss it. Such things as that will do them good.

Hon. T. J. Williams has introduced in the legislature a petition and resolution signed by a number of freeholders of this county, praying that the office of county attorney be abolished. It is presented on the belief that competent legal talent can be secured by the year at a much less figure than the present salary allowed county attorneys.—Echo.

It runs in our mind that the subject of irrigation ought to be one of momentous concern to the farmers of Webster county and the business men of Red Cloud and other cities in the county. Much depends on irrigation in the future success of agriculture in the state. Let some one make a mope in the right direction and set the ball rolling. With a good system of irrigation Nebraska would become the greatest agricultural producing state in the Union. Will our business men take hold of the project in an enthusiastic manner?

It is our opinion that the present legislature should devise means to have the licenses for saloons go directly into the city treasury, there to be used for city purposes, instead of going into the school fund. It is done so in Illinois and we believe that it is more satisfactory to the people. It looks altogether wrong to take the saloon licenses to educate the children with. It is virtually recognizing an evil for the perpetuity of education. Of course it does not contaminate the money, but it is the principle of the transaction by which an evil is countenanced in order that money may be procured to educate the growing generation to despise the saloon. If the money was paid into the city it could be made to repair much of the damage caused by the saloon. The law should be changed.

There is such a thing as merchants being a little too economical in cutting down their business with newspapers. Suppose that in return for a failure to patronize them sufficiently so that they could make a living, that the newspapers of this or any other city would close their doors and stop their publications. What would then become of the town? A man cannot afford to invest a large sum in printing presses to help build up a city, if the business men have not enterprise enough to stand by those men, and give them sufficient support. A newspaper is expected to do more hard work for a city than all of the other combined efforts, still some people think they can live and prosper on wind. Certainly a merchant cannot expect to sell goods without a liberal display of printer's ink. If it were not for the newspapers urging people to stay by the home dealers, many of them would buy goods in other places, where they might procure small bargains, and many other similar things the newspapers work for, and in return, they are often left stranded on the bleak shores of despair, from a failure of support. A merchant should at least occupy a small space in a newspaper, if for no other reason than to show that he is alive and progressive, for dead men rarely ever cash any more.

While our friends, the alliance, are so seriously opposed to all railway corporations they must certainly give the S. & N. great credit for the large amount of good they have done the western sufferers in hauling free over 150 or more loads of coal and provisions for the needy in the west. If freight had been paid on all this large amount of supplies it would have amounted to a large sum. But the S. & N., appreciating the situation, have donated the whole amount, and still some people will keep on cursing the company.—Ex.

Another Old Settler Gone.
On last Saturday afternoon, all that was mortal of John N. Potter was consigned to the tomb, he having peacefully passed away on Friday, January 30, after a brief illness. Mr. Potter came to Webster county in 1876 from Iowa, and had lived in this city during the early settlement of this county, and had passed through many of the trials incident to the colonizing of new countries. He was born in 1816 and consequently would have been 74 years of age at his death. He was a very robust man, and during his declining years it was a great help to him. In early life he united with the church and remained a steadfast christian. He was the father of six children four boys and two girls four of whom live in Webster county. The funeral services were largely attended by relatives and friends and took place from his late residence on east eighth avenue, Rev. E. J. Randall officiating. It can be truly said of him that he had lived a life of usefulness here and at last laid down the trials of earth for a life far better in the land beyond. THE CHIEF extends its condolence to the bereaved family, who have the entire sympathy of the community in their hour of affliction.

Free Coinage of Silver.
In what manner shall free coinage of silver immediately help those who have no silver to coin? In what manner will he obtain these newly coined dollars, different from the manner in which he obtains the dollars we have now? Can the man who has a mortgage, and nothing else to sell, dispose of it for limitless supply of those newly coined dollars in the hands of those who possess the raw material of which the dollars are made? However plentiful money may become, shall we not be required to give some thing in exchange for it, as now? If money shall become so plentiful and cheap that every one can have it by merely reaching out his hands for it, what will it then buy of the things we want and need for pleasure and comfort? Will the man who has no crops then be able to exchange that which he has not for all the dollars he wants? The farmer who has products to spare can readily exchange the same at good prices for ready cash now, without the least difficulty, and the man who has nothing would not be likely to exchange it for money if the dollars were a million times more plentiful. Money is but a medium of exchange, and those that have nothing to exchange will not be much effected by increase or decrease of circulating medium. In some manner some people somehow have imbibed the foolish idea, that with a plentiful supply of circulating medium, exchange can be made where there is nothing to exchange. The time will probably never come when we will be able to get dollars in other way than that in which we now get them, and that is by either giving something or doing something for them.

This insane notion which seems to have grown up that in some manner money is to be distributed promiscuously, plentifully and indiscriminately without consideration, ought to be compelled by return to reason and common sense principles. A little bit of reason and common sense is sufficient to counteract the wind of a lot of demagogues, who insist that all people can be legislated rich regardless of individual effort, frugality and industry.—Ex.

A Nebraska editor closes a rhetorical eulogium of the state in the following style: "When the roll call is sounded on the judgment day, and the heavens have rolled together as a scroll, and the reverberation of a wrecked ruined world peals forth the list of eternal rest, I want to hang my weary bones on the gallery-rack of immortality and register in four line pins as a man from Nebraska."

Death of Clara Baker.
(Lines dedicated to her memory by her sister.)
Sweet Clara, notes are all o'er
Since lonely she sleeps in the grave
Her cheeks blown with roses no more
Since death called her spirit away.
She smiles in regions above,
Where all is perfection and love
She is free from all sorrow and pain.
Through grace we will meet her again.
Farewell, Clara though hath left us,
Left a world of pain and care
Gone to heaven to be an angel,
And a crown of glory wear.
Thou art gone dear sister Clara,
Gone from earth to heavenly joy
Gone to be with angels bright
Gone to wear a robe of white.
Daisies white were in your hand,
Take them home to glory land
Keep them till we come to you
Water them with heavenly dew.
Soon will reach that glory land,
Soon to clasp your snow white hand
Soon your dear face to behold,
Then our joy will be untold.
How we loved our darling Clara,
She was dear to all our hearts
Let us live that we may meet her,
On that bright and heavenly shore.

Our friends should give DeWitt's cough and consumption cure a trial. No disappointment follows the use of this reliable medicine, and it merits the praise received from all who use it.

Another Nebraska war is imminent. The Nebraska claims that the corrected census returns give Hastings 13,360 and Beatrice 12,500 people. The queen city of the plains therefore insists that the queen city of the Blue is the fourth and not the third city of Nebraska. The people living on the long stretch of prairie between the belligerent towns have been kept busy dodging brickbats over since the Nebraska's fat was published.
